Track ghetto grows here

by TONI GINETTI and JEFF TRIMBLE

First of two parts

Arlington Park Race Track, billed as the Midwest's best race course, is a place where families are living in cubicles with no washrooms or running water, where women workers fear for their safety and where crime and drug use are commonplace.

Substandard conditions are the norm on the backstretch of Arlington Park, where violations of Arlington Heights village housing, health, and fire codes have been allowed to exist.

A one-month investigation by The Daily Herald has found that life on the backstretch is a stark existence of long working hours, low pay, mistrust and isolation.

THE WORLD IN which the race track workers and their families have lived is a far cry from the suburban community that surrounds them.

Interviews and on-site inspection showed that:

• Fear of rape has prompted women who make up about a third of the backstretch population to use a buddy system at night at the washrooms, a 31-year-old woman said.

• Drug use, especially marijuana is commonplace, workers said. A mother of a 5-year-old girl said she does not allow her daughter out alone in the evenings because men, high on drugs, sometimes threaten children.

• Violence in the backstretch includes one murder this year when Robert R. Scroggins, 26, was stabbed fatally while in his dormitory room last week. Two of his co-workers have been accused.

The race track's security force of some 60 employes and village police patrol the backstretch grounds, but workers say unreported crimes occur regularly despite the patrols.

"We've had a number of women raped here," one groom said. "That's why you see so many dogs around here. They aren't just pets. The women need them for protection."

Deputy Police Chief Paul Buckholtz said only one rape was reported in the village for the year ending in July, but statistics do not break down where the incident occurred. He said only two rapes were reported all last year, but he added that as many as 10 unreported rapes a year occur in the village.

FLAGRANT violations of minimum housing codes have been allowed on the backstretch by race track officials who looked the other way and by village officials who said they didn't know the conditions existed, though twice-weekly inspections of the track were being conducted throughout the summer.

The most glaring violation has been one allowing children to live on the backstretch, in disregard of an agreement made by the village and the race track last year to prohibit children because no rooms exist to accommodate them.

As many as 40 children lived with their parents in the backstretch this year, living in cramped rooms designed for no more than two persons. Common washrooms and showers for the families and other residents are located in the center of the three dormitory buildings.

The children lived on the grounds with the knowledge of track officials. "Sure I knew the kids were there," said William Thayer, Arlington Park general manager. "What am I going to do, throw them in the creek?"

Arlington Park Race Track, owned by Madison Square Garden Corp., has assets of some $26 million, according to records on file with the state racing board. It is the village's largest single taxpayer, providing some $260,000 annually in admission, hotel room and sales taxes and $195,000 in real estate taxes.

BUT WHILE THE track has paid substantially to provide services in the rest of the community, it has failed to enforce health and fire safety standards for the nearly 2,000 grooms and stable workers who live on its grounds.

A five-year agreement, reached in April, 1974, between the track and the Village of Arlington Heights, is in-

by TONI GINNETTI

He asks to be called Sam Turner. He says he fears for his future if his real name is used.

He lives on the Arlington Park Race Track backstretch with his wife, their two children and puppy in a 12-foot by 11-foot concrete-lined room with no washroom or running water.

Crammed into it is an old, metal-framed double bed and a single bed, a clothes rack, food storage cabinet and toaster oven in which Mrs. Turner cooks meals and bakes homemade bread to be sold to earn some extra money.

The room is designed for two, but it is rent-free and he only thing Turner can afford on his $150 per week pay.

HE IS A GROOM on the Arlington Park Race Track's backstretch. He works for one of the trainers, earning about $50 a week for each horse he cares for from sunrise to late afternoon, seven days a week.

The aroma of baking bread is coming from the open door of the Turner's room. Mrs. Turner is waiting for her husband to come home to help take out the rug, sopping with the rain that seeped in the night before.

Her 5-year-old daughter is playing outside. Her 18-month-old son is running back and forth with a cookie in hand, dodging the extension cord hanging across the room to the oven.

TURNER HAS worked at Arlington Park for years, but he knows this is no place for a family. He says the families have been allowed on the track the past two years and he brings his wife and children because he does not like to be separated from them if he doesn't have to be.

"There shouldn't be any kids and dogs and women on the back side, but everything's so high," he says. "Arlington wants our money but they don't want us. It's hard to save even a dime.

"You go outside the gate and try to get a place to stay and you need $1,500 right off the bat by the time you rent furniture and pay security deposits."

"My husband said the other day 'I never thought I'd see the day when my whole paycheck went to the grocery store,'" his wife says. "I sell bread and beer to make some extra money."

Rotten leaves behind area smell

by NANCY GOTLER

Residents blamed it on everything from lawn fertilizer to manure to a radiation cloud from Red China.

But the mysterious, acrid odor permeating a 1.5-mile area in Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect was caused by rotting leaves.

The leaves were unearthed this week by Metropolitan Sanitary District workers at Central and Busse roads, Mount Prospect. They had been buried four feet deep over three acres.

Bill Mack, Arlington Heights environmental health officer, said the compost was uncovered early Thursday at the construction site of a reservoir.

A DOZEN Arlington Heights residents complained to health department and public works officials and Larry Eils, Mount Prospect director of health services, said he received one complaint.

"This morning (Thursday) it was so strong it burned my eyes and the kids had to hold their noses while walking to school," said Valerie Holm, 512 S. Phelps Ave., Arlington Heights. "My house was shut up and I could still smell it."

Kay Rotramel, 517 S. Phelps Ave., said, "I've never smelled anything like it. It's really foul."

Everyone had his own explanation for the odor, which could be smelled from the Arlington Market Shopping Center, Dryden Avenue and Kensington Road in Arlington Heights, to Kenilworth Avenue in Mount Prospect.

Janet Alvin, 513 S. Phelps Ave., half seriously wondered if a radiation cloud reportedly sent from Red China was to blame.

DALE SHEEKS, assistant manager of Chemlawn, a company that fertilizes lawns chemically, was working in the affected area and came closest to guessing the truth about the disagreeable but slightly sweet smell.

He predicted the cause was a pile of rotting wood or leaves and found stacks of wood chips nearby to back up his theory.

But the mystery soon was cleared up and Mack said the smell should be gone by this morning.

Big ain't necessarily beautiful says Bill

by THOMAS LEE

Bill Veeck wants to thank you all most sincerely for coming to Comiskey Park this season. And he hopes you'll come next year, too, to watch the White Sox win the pennant and maybe even sweep the World Series.

No doubt about it, the colorful Sox owner likes to think BIG.

But Bill Veeck would like to talk about something other than baseball. Something not quite — but almost — as important. If he can just have a minute of your time, Bill Veeck would like to talk about bigness, about how we all ought to get together and fight it.

OUR HOMOGENIZED, pablumized, computerized, mechanized society — those are Veeck's words — should think smaller, should think more about the little fella.

"We seem to denigrate the most important thing we have in our society: the human animal," Veeck told the Des Plaines Chamber of Commerce Thursday. "We seem to want to make people fit a common mold." And that's not good, he contends.

People ought to fight back, he says. Maybe everyone can't engineer the war, he admits, but everyone can fight a little battle here and a little battle there, and bring bigness to its knees.

"Do the little cards inserted in magazines bother you?" Veeck asks, getting the predictable chorus of agreement. "I'll bet you take them out and throw them away. After today, don't. Take them out and mail them in. Better yet, fill them out and mail them in."

"AND YOU DON'T have to write down your own name," Veeck

Refugee's struggle to adjust ends

Nguyen Thi Hoa knew three English phrases.

Hello . . . How are you . . . Bye bye.

She went out of her way to say them. Whenever she saw neighbors or passed strangers in the street, she used them. Usually in conjunction with a smile and a quick, exaggerated wave.

They allowed her some slight affinity with people.

They also constituted the whole of her transition to American life.

AT HOME, SHE spoke Vietnamese almost exclusively. They were all refugees, except for one granddaughter, Nguyet, and her husband Emmett Morgan, a former G.I. who also spoke fluent Vietnamese. There was no need for English.

And, after all, the family was the reason she left Vietnam.

"She had two choices," recalled Morgan of 802 Dorman St., Streamwood. "She could have either stayed there by herself or come with the family, and the family was all she had."

She chose the family.

She never questioned her choice. It enabled her to see her great-grandson when he was born last March. It gave her two more years to spend with a family she would have otherwise divorced. And when she developed liver cancer, it allowed her comfort in her final days.

BUT ADJUSTMENT was difficult. Three short phrases do not take you far.

"She had a hard time over here because, like a lot of older Vietnamese, she didn't speak English," Morgan said. "Everything we do over here is Strange star-like light sighted over U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet press reported Thursday a strange, star-like ball of light was sighted over Petrozavodsk in Soviet Karelia early Tuesday, "spreading over it like a jellyfish" and showering down shafts of light.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the strange light was seen over the northwestern Soviet city at about 4 a.m. Tuesday (8 p.m. CDT Monday), about the same time a similar phenomenon was observed over neighboring Finland.

The news agency could offer no explanation for the sighting.

"A huge star suddenly flashed out of a dark sky, sending shafts of light impulses to earth," Tass said. "This star was moving slowly towards Petrozavodsk and spreading over it like a jellyfish. It stopped and hovered over the city, sending out numerous thin light rays like a downpour of rain.

"SOME TIME LATER the illumination ended," the agency reported. "The jellyfish turned into a bright semicircle and resumed its movement toward Onega Lake.

"Then there formed in this shroud a semi-circular glow, bright red in the middle and white on the sides. This phenomenon, according to witnesses, lasted from 10 to 12 minutes."

Reports from Helsinki Tuesday said a bright ball of fire was visible for about four minutes over the Finnish capital. There was speculation there it could have been a Soviet rocket stage burning up.

Tass quoted Yuri Gromov, director of the Petrozavodsk meteorological observatory, as saying there were no technical experiments under way and no unusual weather. "What caused this remains an enigma," he said.

Strange star-like light sighted over U.S.S.R.

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet press reported Thursday a strange, star-like ball of light was sighted over Petrozavodsk in Soviet Karelia early Tuesday, "spreading over it like a jellyfish" and showering down shafts of light.

The Soviet news agency Tass said the strange light was seen over the northwestern Soviet city at about 4 a.m. Tuesday (8 p.m. CDT Monday), about the same time a similar phenomenon was observed over neighboring Finland.

The news agency could offer no explanation for the sighting.

"A huge star suddenly flashed out of a dark sky, sending shafts of light impulses to earth," Tass said. "This star was moving slowly towards Petrozavodsk and spreading over it like a jellyfish. It stopped and hovered over the city, sending out numerous thin light rays like a downpour of rain.

"SOME TIME LATER the illumination ended," the agency reported. "The jellyfish turned into a bright semicircle and resumed its movement toward Onega Lake.

"Then there formed in this shroud a semi-circular glow, bright red in the middle and white on the sides. This phenomenon, according to witnesses, lasted from 10 to 12 minutes."

Reports from Helsinki Tuesday said a bright ball of fire was visible for about four minutes over the Finnish capital. There was speculation there it could have been a Soviet rocket stage burning up.

Tass quoted Yuri Gromov, director of the Petrozavodsk meteorological observatory, as saying there were no technical experiments under way and no unusual weather. "What caused this remains an enigma," he said.

Thompson inks generic drug bill

by KURT BAER

Families will save up to $400 a year under a bill signed Thursday by Gov. James R. Thompson which allows pharmacists to substitute generic drugs for more expensive name brand prescriptions.

But it may be six months or more before consumers get the full benefit of the new law because pharmacists will offer the generic drug substitution only from an approved list drawn up and published by a seven-member technical advisory council. The council members will be appointed by Dr. Paul Peterson, director of the Illinois Dept. of Public Health.

"It will take at least six months to publish the list and distribute it to pharmacies," State Rep. William A. Marovitz, D-Chicago, House sponsor of the bill, said Thursday.

MAROVITZ SAID families will be able to save as much as $300 to $400 annually on the cost of prescription medicine once drug substitution takes hold in Illinois.

A 1976 survey found that name brand drugs sold in the Chicago area were 93 per cent more expensive on the average than the generic equivalent, he said.

For example, Darvon, a brand name pain killer, costs $8 per 100 tablets. The generic equivalent, a drug called propoxyphene, costs $4 per 100 tablets, he said.

Thompson, in a bill-signing ceremony in the State of Illinois building, called the new law "an important initial step toward lowering health care costs, particularly for those who must live on fixed incomes." Generic drug substitution has been supported vigorously by senior citizens and consumer interest groups.

THOMPSON DID NOT use his amendatory veto to return the bill to the legislature, as some supporters of the measure had feared, because he said "it was important not to send it back to the General Assembly where there might have been new attempts to kill it."

The governor said he had some technical question about the law, but had been assured by Dr. Peterson that it was workable in its present form.

Here is how generic drug substitution will work in Illinois:

- Prescription forms will have two boxes printed on them — one headed May Not Substitute, the other May Substitute. If a doctor checks the no substitution box, the pharmicist will not be permitted to offer the customer a generic drug in place of the prescribed brand name.
- If the May Substitute box is checked, or if neither box is marked, the pharmicist can offer the customer a substitute generic drug provided it is on the state approved list. Only those drugs that the state finds to be chemically equivalent will appear on the list.

Neither patients nor pharmicists are required to use generic drug substitution. It is an option for consumers and druggists alike.

Thompson said he gave the generic drug bill more consideration than any other piece of legislation that has come across his desk.

"Whether it's for senior citizens or babes in arms, for persons on fixed income, or just plain folks who want to save money, we hope the end product will be lower health care costs," he said.

The governor denied reporters' suggestions that profit considerations were behind the Illinois Pharmaceutical Association's opposition to the bill, and said he was not pressured by any drug companies to veto the bill.

"Like many other small businessmen, many pharmicists fear that this law means government looking over their shoulder one more time for one more reason. They fear additional reporting requirements. But I think in many cases the fears are unfounded," Thompson said.

continues. "Put down George Washington of Mount Vernon, N.Y. Or Abe Lincoln of Springfield, Ill. My own favorite is George Custer of Monroe, Mich."

If everyone took part, Veeck says, the resulting torrent of mail would bring giant mailrooms to a standstill. They wouldn't know what to do.

Another Veeck battlefield is junk mail.

People get junk mail by the tons, and what do they do with it? They toss it out. That's not doing manly battle, of course. So Veeck urges — naturally — to mail it back.

And to double your fun, put it inside somebody else's return-postage-guaranteed envelope. They may curse you inside those big board rooms, but another battle will be fought, he says.

VEECK CONCEDES that sometimes a battle is lost.

Once — it was just last Christmas, as a matter of fact — the venerable baseball promoter went shopping for a Christmas present.

"I went to get a present for my youngest granddaughter," Veeck said. "What I wanted was one of these hobby horses on springs. You know the kind.

"So I went to Marshall Field and I asked if they'd deliver it. I live at 4800 south, see. So they delivered it in a box, a big box. They said I could assemble it in one hour. So suddenly it was Christmas Eve and I discovered the thing had 189 parts. Do you believe it? A hundred and eighty-nine parts!

"WELL IT TOOK me until 5 a.m. to put it together, and I had a stiff back, and the hobby horse had its head where its tail should have been. So I called it Charlie O'.

"When I sent in my check, I tore it into 189 parts and wrote a little note along. I said, 'If you like to put things together so much, put this together.' And they did. The check cleared with about two pounds of scotch tape on it."

But it was a battle fought for a reason, Veeck believes.

"It is important that people run the machines. It is important that people remember that people are more important than machines."

One more thing. Bill Veeck wants your help.

"If there's anything you can think of to zing the establishment, let me know."

Families cope with track woes

daughter, she brings her along to work. The baby rides a pony there while her mother tends to her horses.

The work day starts as early as 4:30 a.m. "We work till about 11 a.m. Then we come home and sleep for a couple hours if I can, if there isn't laundry or things to do. We go back to the barn from about 3 to 5 p.m., but if a horse is running in the last race, sometimes you don't get home till 7 p.m.

"It's no place for kids," she admits. She says her family would be better off living off the track, but they can't afford it here. If families are not allowed on the rack next year, "we'd have to quit," she says.

Debbie lives on the backstretch, too, with her husband and 20-month-old daughter, Shanda. Debbie's husband also works as a groom, but Debbie stays home to tend to the baby.

There are no good play facilities for children on the track, so Debbie takes her daughter to nearby South Park, Euclid Avenue and Rohlwing Road.

She says they have an apartment in Indiana, about 20 minutes from Churchill Downs, Ky., but the family lives at Arlington Park during the season to be together.

"We don't pay any rent here. That's the only way we can do it," she says. Her room, though only meant for two people, is neatly kept and cooled by a window air conditioner. She cooks meals here because the cafeteria "is too expensive and not that good."

But Debbie says she doesn't like track life at Arlington Park. "I'll be glad to leave here."

different from Vietnam.

"Here she was, in the middle of the suburbs. If we went out, she would be alone. We had enough Vietnamese foods for her to eat, but who could she talk to? What would she do? Watch the cars go by?"

Mrs. Nguyen was middle-aged when she fled Vietnam with her daughter and nine grandchildren in April 1975 aboard the last fixed aircraft that took off from Tan Son Nhut Air Base before it was closed by North Vietnamese rocket fire.

NO ONE, including Mrs. Nguyen, knew how old she was. Small agrarian towns like Soc Trang in the southern part of South Vietnam didn't keep records.

It didn't really make much of a difference. What counted was she was old. Too old, she figured, to start learning a new language.

She also was illiterate. In Vietnam, the only word she learned to write was her first name. In America, she was taught how to write her full name to meet the requirements of all the forms and applications.

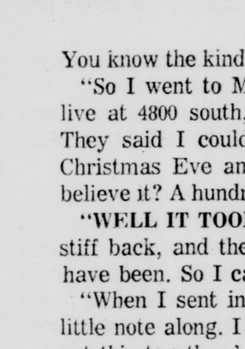
After she and her grandchildren got to Streamwood in the fall of 1975 to live with Morgan, she had wanted to work. But she was too sick.

SO SHE TRIED to help out at home. She'd pitch in with the housework and the cooking, and at times she pitched in too much. She would get in the way and have to be told to sit down, to take it easy.

And then she would take out her basket of needles and thread and begin to sew. It was her favorite pastime, right up there with listening to tape recordings of Vietnamese operas.

Occasionally, she and the family would drive to Chinatown for oriental food, and she would go to the back of the restaurant and stand before a small statue of Buddha, paying homage.

But she didn't talk about Vietnam any more. She talked only a little about the United States, always saying that life here seemed "easier" and that she wished she was well enough to take a job.



Nguyen Thi Hoa

She was never told that she had terminal cancer. In Vietnamese, the family said only that she had a liver disease.

"Otherwise, she would have given up," Morgan said. "That's the type of person she was."

BUT IT IS DOUBTFUL she was fooled. There are languages besides those spoken.

But, until the end, she never suggested what she may have sensed. On Monday, she was taken to the hospital for the last time. Mrs. Morgan visited her, and they talked a little in Vietnamese. There was no mention of death.

Still, when Mrs. Morgan began to leave, Mrs. Nguyen spoke to her in one of those English phrases she rarely used with the family.

"Bye bye," she said.

"I didn't know what she meant," Mrs. Morgan recalled. "I didn't know the meaning, but the next morning, she died."

Knievel charged in alleged assault

- Motorcycle stunt rider Evel Knievel was free on $1,000 bail Thursday after he allegedly used a baseball bat to beat ex-television executive Shelly Saltman.

Saltman recently wrote a book branding Knievel "an alcoholic, a pill pusher and an immoral person." Knievel was booked in Los Angeles Wednesday night on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon — the bat — after the alleged attack. Saltman told police a man held him on the ground while Knievel struck him with the bat. Saltman, former publicity agent for the stuntman, wrote the book entitled "Evel Knievel on Tour," which Knievel says insults him and his family.

tended "to protect the health and safety of personnel living in the backstretch area." A major condition of the agreement to improve fire safety has been met with the installation of sprinkling systems in wooden barns and the construction of several new fire-resistant barns and dormitories.

But other provisions have been disregarded or enforced only in passing:

- Daily fire inspections are not performed. Fire extinguishers are missing throughout the backstretch's trailer park and some horse barns.
- Identification cards for many workers have not been issued.
- Residents are allowed to cook in their rooms despite a prohibition against it.
- Backstretch personnel are untrained in the use of firefighting equipment, a fact officials say is the result of "no interest" on the part of the workers.
- Broken door screens, windows and fixtures and even a water cooler whose metal covering was missing were found on the backstretch, conditions officials blame on vandalism problems.

Track and village officials said inspections are conducted regularly on the track. They blamed the vastness of the 170-acre park and chronic vandalism for some of the deficiencies.

But two days after The Daily Herald questioned the violations, Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson sent a letter to Arlington Park president Joseph Joyce "to review the five-year agreement."

The letter reminded Joyce that the agreement "assigns responsibility to Arlington Park Race Track for developing and enforcing procedures for registration of backstretch personnel, housekeeping and fire protection of the backstretch."

A separate agreement between the race track and the village reached last year was aimed at removing children from the backstretch because of the area's dangers and the lack of appropriate housing for families.

BUT VILLAGE officials said they were unaware of the children's presence this year despite the fact that the track was visited at least twice weekly for health inspections during the summer.

And even after officials supposedly first learned of the violations in late August, no action was taken against the track and no effort has been made to correct the housing violations.

Village officials say they were unaware of the family living conditions until late August when The Daily Herald and The Traveler's Aid Society, an organization providing social services for backstretch residents, began making inquiries into the matter.

Daniel Tarry, village environmental health officer, who visits the race track at least twice weekly making inspections, said he did not know children were living on the track though he acknowledged often seeing the youngsters mingling on the track grounds.

"When I see kids on bikes I don't know if they are with their parents or just visiting or what," Tarry said. "I frankly was not aware that anyone was living in the dorms with this many kids.

"It's easy to criticize that there is a lack of enforcement, but you have to realize that we have three dorms there and these dorms are big. I have no reason to invade their privacy," he said.

BUT TARRY'S supervisor, George Weinand, admitted that the families should have been detected during inspections.

"If anyone should have picked it up, we should have picked it up," said Weinand, who is village health services coordinator. "We should pick them up on inspections, quite frankly."

Thayer admitted knowing of the children's presence, alleging that they were "snuck in at night" by their parents.

Many of the problems The Daily Herald found are the same that racing board chairman Lucy Reum and the village found in comprehensive inspections conducted in 1973.

In a report released then, Mrs. Reum said that "the importance of the board's attention to the needs of the backstretch cannot be overemphasized."

It added as a first recommendation for improvement that racing management and municipalities be made aware that "backstretch personnel are a part of and not apart from the rest of society. They are entitled to the protection.

Saturday: Passing the blame for Arlington Park's backstretch conditions.

Thompson inks generic drug bill

by KURT BAER

Families will save up to $400 a year under a bill signed Thursday by Gov. James R. Thompson which allows pharmacists to substitute generic drugs for more expensive name brand prescriptions.

But it may be six months or more before consumers get the full benefit of the new law because pharmacists will offer the generic drug substitution only from an approved list drawn up and published by a seven-member technical advisory council. And then she would take out her basket of needles and thread and begin to sew. It was her favorite pastime, right up there with listening to tape recordings of Vietnamese operas.

Occasionally, she and the family would drive to Chinatown for oriental food, and she would go to the back of the restaurant and stand before a small statue of Buddha, paying homage.

But she didn't talk about Vietnam any more. She talked only a little about the United States, always saying that life here seemed "easier" and that she wished she was well enough to take a job.

Nguyen Thi Hoa

She was never told that she had terminal cancer. In Vietnamese, the family said only that she had a liver disease.

"Otherwise, she would have given up," Morgan said. "That's the type of person she was."

BUT IT IS DOUBTFUL she was fooled. There are languages besides those spoken.

But, until the end, she never suggested what she may have sensed. On Monday, she was taken to the hospital for the last time. Mrs. Morgan visited her, and they talked a little in Vietnamese. There was no mention of death.

Still, when Mrs. Morgan began to leave, Mrs. Nguyen spoke to her in one of those English phrases she rarely used with the family.

"Bye bye," she said.

"I didn't know what she meant," Mrs. Morgan recalled. "I didn't know the meaning, but the next morning, she died."

daughter, she brings her along to work. The baby rides a pony there while her mother tends to her horses.

The work day starts as early as 4:30 a.m. "We work till about 11 a.m. Then we come home and sleep for a couple hours if I can, if there isn't laundry or things to do. We go back to the barn from about 3 to 5 p.m., but if a horse is running in the last race, sometimes you don't get home till 7 p.m.

"It's no place for kids," she admits. She says her family would be better off living off the track, but they can't afford it here. If families are not allowed on the rack next year, "we'd have to quit," she says.

Debbie lives on the backstretch, too, with her husband and 20-month-old daughter, Shanda. Debbie's husband also works as a groom, but Debbie stays home to tend to the baby.

There are no good play facilities for children on the track, so Debbie takes her daughter to nearby South Park, Euclid Avenue and Rohlwing Road.

She says they have an apartment in Indiana, about 20 minutes from Churchill Downs, Ky., but the family lives at Arlington Park during the season to be together.

"We don't pay any rent here. That's the only way we can do it," she says. Her room, though only meant for two people, is neatly kept and cooled by a window air conditioner. She cooks meals here because the cafeteria "is too expensive and not that good."

But Debbie says she doesn't like track life at Arlington Park. "I'll be glad to leave here."

Knievel charged in alleged assault

• Motorcycle stunt rider Evel Knievel was free on $1,000 bail Thursday after he allegedly used a baseball bat to beat ex-television executive Shelly Saltman.

Saltman recently wrote a book branding Knievel "an alcoholic, a pill pusher and an immoral person." Knievel was booked in Los Angeles Wednesday night on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon — the bat — after the alleged attack. Saltman told police a man held him on the ground while Knievel struck him with the bat. Saltman, former publicity agent for the stuntman, wrote the book entitled "Evel Knievel on Tour," which Knievel says insults him and his family.

tended "to protect the health and safety of personnel living in the backstretch area." A major condition of the agreement to improve fire safety has been met with the installation of sprinkling systems in wooden barns and the construction of several new fire-resistant barns and dormitories.

But other provisions have been disregarded or enforced only in passing:

• Daily fire inspections are not performed. Fire extinguishers are missing throughout the backstretch's trailer park and some horse barns.

• Identification cards for many workers have not been issued.

• Residents are allowed to cook in their rooms despite a prohibition against it.

• Backstretch personnel are untrained in the use of firefighting equipment, a fact officials say is the result of "no interest" on the part of the workers.

• Broken door screens, windows and fixtures and even a water cooler whose metal covering was missing were found on the backstretch, conditions officials blame on vandalism problems.

Track and village officials said inspections are conducted regularly on the track. They blamed the vastness of the 170-acre park and chronic vandalism for some of the deficiencies.

But two days after The Daily Herald questioned the violations, Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson sent a letter to Arlington Park president Joseph Joyce "to review the five-year agreement."

The letter reminded Joyce that the agreement "assigns responsibility to Arlington Park Race Track for developing and enforcing procedures for registration of backstretch personnel, housekeeping and fire protection of the backstretch."

A separate agreement between the race track and the village reached last year was aimed at removing children from the backstretch because of the area's dangers and the lack of appropriate housing for families.

BUT VILLAGE officials said they were unaware of the children's presence this year despite the fact that the track was visited at least twice weekly for health inspections during the summer.

And even after officials supposedly first learned of the violations in late August, no action was taken against the track and no effort has been made to correct the housing violations.

Village officials say they were unaware of the family living conditions until late August when The Daily Herald and The Traveler's Aid Society, an organization providing social services for backstretch residents, began making inquiries into the matter.

Daniel Tarry, village environmental health officer, who visits the race track at least twice weekly making inspections, said he did not know children were living on the track though he acknowledged often seeing the youngsters mingling on the track grounds.

"When I see kids on bikes I don't know if they are with their parents or just visiting or what," Tarry said. "I frankly was not aware that anyone was living in the dorms with this many kids.

"It's easy to criticize that there is a lack of enforcement, but you have to realize that we have three dorms there and these dorms are big. I have no reason to invade their privacy," he said.

BUT TARRY'S supervisor, George Weinand, admitted that the families should have been detected during inspections.

"If anyone should have picked it up, we should have picked it up," said Weinand, who is village health services coordinator. "We should pick them up on inspections, quite frankly."

Thayer admitted knowing of the children's presence, alleging that they were "snuck in at night" by their parents.

Many of the problems The Daily Herald found are the same that racing board chairman Lucy Reum and the village found in comprehensive inspections conducted in 1973.

In a report released then, Mrs. Reum said that "the importance of the board's attention to the needs of the backstretch cannot be overemphasized."

It added as a first recommendation for improvement that racing management and municipalities be made aware that "backstretch personnel are a part of and not apart from the rest of society. They are entitled to the protection.

Tension hurting Harper: consultant

by RENA WISH COHEN

There is a blanket of tension covering Harper College, and it will take a "new management style" and new provisions for participatory decision-making to lift it, a consultant said Thursday night.

Max Tadlock, head of a California firm hired by the school's board of trustees to do a $10,000 study of Harper's administrative effectiveness, said the college suffers from a "grave uneasiness" that stems from the centralized decision-making instituted 12 years ago to get the college off the ground.

Tadlock praised the "hard-charging, imaginative, tough, go-getting" group of administrators who made Harper into a nationally respected institution, but in his written report he said that the college's management style has "lost the human, personal quality" one expects in an educational institution.

THE REPORT SAID deans and other Harper administrators feel isolated and alienated from the top four administrators — Harper College Pres. Robert E. Lahti and the vice presidents of business, student services and academic affairs.

Tadlock said Harper staff members need more positive reinforcement and the administration has to refocus interest, not on the process of administrating, but on the educational program.

Bu Tadlock told the crowd of about 125 persons that his study was not the witch-hunt against Lahti that some people believed.

"As is often the case with these audits, there was a myth, a strong perception that our function was to assist the board (of trustees) in attacking the president and administration of the school.

"WE DID NOT, during any part of this investigation, find ourselves unduly pressured to skew the findings one way or another."

Tadlock said the tension between the board and administration was "at a state of almost impasse" which had "reduced the institution to the point of waiting for the other shoe to fall."

One result of that impasse has been foot-dragging on progress toward updating the college's 12-year-old master plan, he said. That delay has the college "treading water," not knowing where the institution is going and how to get there.

Tadlock called that a "serious indictment" and said a new master plan should begin immediately and might be the vehicle for starting more participation in school affairs, which the college sorely needs.

Lance welcomed as hero; gets Atlanta bank job offer

CALHOUN, Ga. (UPI) — Bert Lance came home a hero Thursday to cheering friends, VIP police escorts, "We Back Bert" signs and a job offer — as board chairman at his old Atlanta bank.

Lance got out of Washington by private plane within 24 hours of his dramatic resignation announcement, leaving his deputy in charge of the White House Office of Management and Budget and returning to his northwest Georgia hometown, pop. 6,000, "to get a little rest."

A police-escorted motorcade whisked Lance and his wife, LaBelle, from tiny Gordon County Airport into Calhoun, where an estimated 1,200 residents awaited them under a red-white-and-blue "Welcome Home" banner.

The crowd cheered the couple and made clear where their sentiments lie in "the Lance Affair" that forced their man out of office. They waved signs reading "We Back Bert" and bearing slogans criticizing the news media and the senate investigators who delved into his personal financial affairs.

"I KNOW YOU'VE been standing here a long time in this hot, beautiful Georgia sun," Lance told the crowd, which had waited more than two hours on a sweltering day. "It's sometimes so polluted in Washington, you don't get to see the sun very often.

"LaBelle and I can't tell you how much this means to us today, to be welcomed back home like this."

Before he left Washington, Lance said in a telephone interview with Atlanta's WSB radio that he'd made "no decision yet" on how he would go about picking up the threads of life as an unemployed, heavily indebted private citizen.

Bob Dietsch, his Washington spokesman, said Lance would return to the nation's capital this weekend and would attend a farewell party Monday.

In Atlanta, the comments of influential professional bankers brought speculation Lance might become board chairman of the National Bank of Georgia, which he headed as president just before he joined the Carter administration.

DeLuca to be billed for costs of trial

Prosecutors said Thursday they will try to collect more than $61,000 in court costs from Frank DeLuca in connection with his conviction for a triple murder in Elk Grove Village. DeLuca was to be sent to the Illinois State Penitentiary today but a court-costs petition is expected to delay his transfer from Cook County Jail. The Cook County State's Attorney's office decided to bill DeLuca when it was discovered the former Elk Grove Village druggist has savings of $26,000 in a pension fund. DeLuca and his lover, Patricia Columbo, were found guilty July 1 of the murders of Miss Columbo's parents and younger brother. They were sentenced Aug. 8 to three concurrent prison terms of from 200 to 300 years each.

Game to decide fate of budget

Putting his reputation for fiscal restraint on the line, Gov. James R. Thompson said in Chicago Thursday he will increase Chicago State University's budget if he loses a racquetball match to the school's president next week. CSU Pres. Benjamin H. Alexander accepted a challenge from Thompson, who during a tour of the universitycampus last spring, said, "If you beat me at racquetball, I'll increase your budget." The match is scheduled for Sept. 28 at the Michigan Avenue Club in Chicago.

Body of stabbing victim found

The nude body of a man who had been stabbed to death was found in the Spring Lake Forest Preserve near West Chicago, DuPage County Sheriff's police said Thursday. The coroner's office said there were four or more stab wounds in the man's chest and his throat had been slashed. The man, white and about 50 years old, had been in the field at least 48 hours before he was found by a man walking his dog. No identification could be made through fingerprints.

Legion flu death probe next week

An investigation into how a 51-year-old man contracted the mysterious Legionnaire's Disease probably will begin next week, Rock Island County authorities said Thursday. Donald Dumolien, Silvis, Ill., who had been undergoing treatment for the disease at Moline Lutheran Hospital, died Sept. 14. Officials at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta confirmed he died of Legionnaire's Disease. Rock Island County Health Administrator Fred Siebenman said the CDC in Atlanta will tell the Illinois Public Health Dept. how to conduct the investigation and the state health department then will give the information to the county health department.

Patients to be removed from home

Thirteen mentally ill or retarded patients will be removed soon from a Springfield nursing home accused of tolerating unsanitary conditions and open sex and drug abuse by staff members, a spokesman for Gov. James R. Thompson said Thursday. Tom Berkshire, the governor's liaison with the Illinois Mental Health Dept., said nine developmentally disabled and four emotionally disturbed patients at the Ridgewood Nursing Home are "not getting the kind of care they should." Berkshire said department officials have decided the patients must be removed "and will have them switched to other homes soon."

PITCHING TENTS, making down-filled clothing and drying foods are all part of Rolling Meadows High School's new outdoor living class. While teaching students to appreciate and survive in the wilderness, the class also stresses the need for cooperation — a message not lost on Paul Adams right, or Pete Siebeck in Thursday's tent pitching exercise at the school.

Wilderness lives in the classroom

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

"This tent has been through 50-mile-an-hour winds and 2 inches of rain in one night without any problems," Steve Prorak tells the teen-agers standing around him. "The key is to make the rain fly tight and wrinkle-free so the wind won't catch it and blow it away."

His audience listens attentively as he rattles off the do's and don'ts of pitching and striking tents and the pros and cons of the four tents before them.

The scene may sound like part of a scout program, but it's a new outdoor living class at Rolling Meadows High School in High School Dist. 214 aimed at teaching students to appreciate and survive in the wilderness...

Jointly taught by a science teacher and a home economics teacher, the 18-week course covers everything from drying foods and making down-filled clothing to navigating river crossings and mastering first aid.

HOW MUCH THE students learn will be put to a practical test during a day hike in Wisconsin's Kettle Moraine State Park and an overnight campout in White Pines State Forest, west of DeKalb.

"Students who are really interested will find out more than they'll ever need to know about outdoor living," science teacher Prorak said.

In the home economics segment of the course, students plan nutritional menus for short and long trips, taking the camper's high calorie needs into account; make "trail mixes" of fruits and nuts; oven dry foods and package them for individual meals; and make dow-filled vests, jackets, sleeping bags and gators, teacher Gloria Lorenz said.

The males in the class are a bit leery of the sewing project, but they are confident they will manage somehow.

IN THE SCIENCE segment of the course, students learn to select, use and care for camping equipment; cope with the potential hazards of bad weather, animals and people; use maps and compasses; plan an extended backpacking trip; and preserve the wilderness while enjoying it, Prorak said.

Camp fires are not allowed because they scar the land and take away wood, he said. Instead, students are taught to use a small propane camp stove or a "buddy burner" made of two cans, corrugated cardboard and wax.

It's these "small but important" aspects of camping that many of the 46 juniors and seniors in the class say they want to learn more about.

"People after me want to go out camping too so why should I ruin it for them?" junior Andy Chatten said. "It really makes me mad when I go out canoeing and see cans and tires in the water."

THE OUTDOOR living experiences of the students range from extensive to almost non-existent. The main point Prorak and Ms. Lorenz hope to get across to all of them is that common sense and good planning are essential to survival in the wilderness.

"I've been in potentially hazardous situations with snow storms and lightning storms, but I've never had a real problem because I planned for it and used common sense," said Prorak who has backpacked, camped and climbed mountains in Alaska, Washington, California and Colorado.

He warns students that temperatures in mountainous regions fluctuate greatly and that even if it is 90 degrees when they start out they should bring clothes to get them through 20-degree weather.

THEY MUST BE able to pitch tents quickly and correctly because a mountain rain storm with 50-mile-an-hour winds can come up in a minute and blow everything away if it's not secure, he warns.

A working knowledge of first aid also is a must because ambulances and paramedics don't quickly come to the rescue in the wilderness, Prorak tells the students. With any injury, the important thing is to relieve the pain and make the person mobile.

"You have to try to anticipate everything that can possibly happen out there and prepare for it," he said.

Dist. 59 receives funds to continue reading plan

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 has received at $121,181 federal grant to continue its Right to Read program.

Now in its second year, the program trains classroom teachers to diagnose students' reading problems and to develop programs to prevent those problems, said Robert Bortnick, the program's director.

Parents also are offered suggestions on how to help their children with reading at home as part of the program, he said.

"The goal is to prevent reading problems that could develop later into the need to provide intensive remedial instruction," Bortnick said.

The kindergarten through third grade program this year will operate at eight Dist. 59 schools including Hopkins, Marshall, Grant Wood and Rupley schools in Elk Grove Village and Brentwood, High Ridge Knolls and Einstein schools in Des Plaines.

Eventually, Bortnick said he hopes the program can be expanded to all 16 of the district's elementary schools. Confirmation already has been received that the program's funding will be continued for the 1978-79 school year, but no budget has been set, he said.

Dist. 59's Right to Read program is one of 132 in the nation, Bortnick said.

Why a Truck May Arrive "Early"

Although you may usually see our truck arrive at a certain time — say, 10:30 — there may come a day when a truck arrives at 7:15 — 3 hours "early".

The explanation is this: Garbage collection being a hazardous job, injuries are frequent — and further, working outside in all types of weather, our men tend to have more "sick days" than is usual with jobs which require less exposure.

So there are days when one or more crews are absent. The only way we can give those routes service is to round up as many as 4 trucks from adjacent routes and assign each a part of your route. The best way for these "outside" trucks to handle this is to finish their part of your route first, and then go to their regular routes. As a result, most of your route will get an "early" pick-up that day (any time from 7:00 a.m. on).

But they will all get service. We haven't missed picking up every route in town on its scheduled day for at least the last 8 years.

PITCHING TENTS, making down-filled clothing and drying foods are all part of Rolling Meadows High School's new outdoor living class. While teaching students to appreciate and survive in the wilderness, the class also stresses the need for cooperation — a message not lost on Paul Adams right, or Pete Siebeck in Thursday's tent pitching exercise at the school.

Wilderness lives in the classroom

by SHERYL JEDLINSKI

"This tent has been through 50-mile-an-hour winds and 2 inches of rain in one night without any problems," Steve Prorak tells the teen-agers standing around him. "The key is to make the rain fly tight and wrinkle-free so the wind won't catch it and blow it away."

His audience listens attentively as he rattles off the do's and don'ts of pitching and striking tents and the pros and cons of the four tents before them.

The scene may sound like part of a scout program, but it's a new outdoor living class at Rolling Meadows High School in High School Dist. 214 aimed at teaching students to appreciate and survive in the wilderness...

Jointly taught by a science teacher and a home economics teacher, the 18-week course covers everything from drying foods and making down-filled clothing to navigating river crossings and mastering first aid.

HOW MUCH THE students learn will be put to a practical test during a day hike in Wisconsin's Kettle Moraine State Park and an overnight campout in White Pines State Forest, west of DeKalb.

"Students who are really interested will find out more than they'll ever need to know about outdoor living," science teacher Prorak said.

In the home economics segment of the course, students plan nutritional menus for short and long trips, taking the camper's high calorie needs into account; make "trail mixes" of fruits and nuts; oven dry foods and package them for individual meals; and make dow-filled vests, jackets, sleeping bags and gators, teacher Gloria Lorenz said.

The males in the class are a bit leery of the sewing project, but they are confident they will manage somehow.

IN THE SCIENCE segment of the course, students learn to select, use and care for camping equipment; cope with the potential hazards of bad weather, animals and people; use maps and compasses; plan an extended backpacking trip; and preserve the wilderness while enjoying it, Prorak said.

Camp fires are not allowed because they scar the land and take away wood, he said. Instead, students are taught to use a small propane camp stove or a "buddy burner" made of two cans, corrugated cardboard and wax.

It's these "small but important" aspects of camping that many of the 46 juniors and seniors in the class say they want to learn more about.

"People after me want to go out camping too so why should I ruin it for them?" junior Andy Chatten said. "It really makes me mad when I go out canoeing and see cans and tires in the water."

THE OUTDOOR living experiences of the students range from extensive to almost non-existent. The main point Prorak and Ms. Lorenz hope to get across to all of them is that common sense and good planning are essential to survival in the wilderness.

"I've been in potentially hazardous situations with snow storms and lightning storms, but I've never had a real problem because I planned for it and used common sense," said Prorak who has backpacked, camped and climbed mountains in Alaska, Washington, California and Colorado.

He warns students that temperatures in mountainous regions fluctuate greatly and that even if it is 90 degrees when they start out they should bring clothes to get them through 20-degree weather.

THEY MUST BE able to pitch tents quickly and correctly because a mountain rain storm with 50-mile-an-hour winds can come up in a minute and blow everything away if it's not secure, he warns.

A working knowledge of first aid also is a must because ambulances and paramedics don't quickly come to the rescue in the wilderness, Prorak tells the students. With any injury, the important thing is to relieve the pain and make the person mobile.

"You have to try to anticipate everything that can possibly happen out there and prepare for it," he said.

Open primary deserves vote

The Coalition for Political Honesty has begun a petition drive for an advisory referendum on the open primary issue.

The coalition, which most recently fought for three "political honesty" amendments to the Illinois Constitution, hopes to put the question on the November, 1978, election ballot. To do so, it must gather 625,000 signatures by next August.

The coalition's drive deserves support. Although the results of such a referendum would only be advisory, a vote would give Illinois voters the chance to pressure legislators for a more open political process.

Primaries in Illinois have traditionally been "closed." In order to vote in a primary, an Illinois voter must request either a Republican or Democratic ballot and his choice becomes a matter of public record.

The open primary, which is law in Wisconsin, allows the voter to make his party choice in the privacy of the voting booth. No one but the individual voter knows which party's ballot he or she casts.

Opponents of open primaries say the primary is for party members to choose their candidates and argue that a secret ballot selection would lead to members of the opposite party crossing over for weak candidates to oppose their own "favorites" in the general election.

The objection ignores the fact that the danger of crossover voting is minimal compared to the dangers that already exist with the closed primary.

A voter's primary voting record can be used against him by a party in office. This is especially dangerous in an area where a single, well-organized party dominates, as it does in Chicago.

In those cases, political workers who know how individuals vote can selectively influence the services they receive — or don't receive — from government.

The primary election should not be viewed as a private matter in which only the party faithful have a right to choose candidates. The primary is paid for by all taxpayers and all taxpayers have a right to participate in the voting.

Any law that discourages participation in the elective process is a bad law. The requirement that people "declare a party" is such a law.

The Coalition for Political Honesty has already made efforts at collecting signatures in Des Plaines and Palatine. They will be back. Their petitions deserve support.

Bar to women wrong

In a period where the contribution of women in all walks of life is being increasingly recognized, John Wasylik has the right idea.

Wasylik is national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and he has proposed that the organization reconsider a bylaw change to admit women to full membership. The rule change will be voted on next August.

Wasylik says he believes as many as 100,000 of the nation's half million women veterans would be eligible for membership under the VFW's traditional criteria — service overseas in a combat zone. And he sees no reason to continue the artificial exclusion of women, who otherwise qualify, from membership in the group.

Several local VFW members, upon reflection, agreed with Wasylik's contention, even though their initial reaction — which feminists would label "male chauvenist" — was to label the ideal "ridiculous."

It might comfort the macho fantasies of some VFW members to continue the fiction that no women have served in combat zones. But as Wasylik said, many male veterans owe their lives to Army and Navy nurses — women — who did not bear arms but who nevertheless risked sudden death.

Changing the VFW's outmoded rule against women makes sense. And once that issue is out of the way, VFW members, both male and female, can get on with efforts to prove their organization relevant to the present day.

The White House endured a Jefferson era scandal

Jim Bishop

The dark stain of scandal has been scrubbed from the White House steps before. The lonely intellectual, Thomas Jefferson, died without denying that his slave, Sally Hemings, had been his mistress and that he had fathered several of her children.

He would not deign to deny. The tall, stately redhead had written the Declaration of Independence at the age of 33. There was no mountain of knowledge of philosophy he had not climbed. When he entered the White House in 1800, his calm brow was above intrigue.

Jefferson's mistake may have been that he read one book too many. It was "The Political Progress of Britain," by James Callender. The President was delighted to find that Callender, an immigrant American, looked upon British statesmen as ruffians, swindlers, murderers and mercenaries.

THOMAS JEFFERSON saw Callender as a "man of genius — in his coarse way." The statesman met the muckraker in Philadelphia and introduced him to publishers. Callender's first American book "exposed" Alexander Hamilton, Secretary of the Treasury, as a man involved in corrupt practices, one who reveled in an illicit affair with Mrs. James Reynolds.

The third President of the United States read it on his vast estate at Monticello, Virginia. He was surprised that Hamilton admitted the "affair," but denied stealing. Jefferson felt no warning shudder.

The third book called George Washington "a scandalous hypocrite," one who has "authorized the robbery and ruin of his own army." When Jefferson became president, his protege demanded to be appointed postmaster of Richmond, or he would "tell all." The friendship ended.

Jefferson refused. In 1802, Callender got a job on a scandal sheet called "The Richmond Recorder: or Ladys' and Gentlemen's Miscellany." He wrote an article accusing the President of being involved with two or more women, one of whom was a slave, Sally Hemings. The writer had never been to Monticello, and had never met Miss Hemings, but he described her as "The African Venus." The President, he said, was not fit to be in the company of respectable citizens. No woman, white or black, was safe from Jefferson.

VIRGINIA WAS stunned. The President refused to entertain questions about his conduct. No newspaper sent a reporter to the White House or to Monticello to prove or disprove the story.

Among the many slaves on the plantation, Sally was favored. When Jefferson was ambassador to France, he sent for his daughter Mary and ordered Sally to accompany the child.

Sally's mother was Betty Hemings. She was the property of Colonel Wayles of Virginia. Slaves testified that the colonel fathered many children — some said 14 — by Betty Hemings. Jefferson married the colonel's daughter Martha.

When the old man died, Thomas Jefferson inherited the colonel's slaves. If the Wayles story is true, Betty Heming's children were half-brothers and half-sisters to Mrs. Jefferson.

SALLY WAS ONE of the children. Scandal stains with an unseen brush. Jefferson's biographers — among them the noted Professor John C. Miller — concede that Jefferson never ordered Betty Heming's children to work in the fields. All of them, including Sally, were household servants.

Whatever the President's consuming passion for Sally, or lack of it he risked the presidency in 1804 by leaving the White House as frequently as possible to be with "my children and grandchildren." He brought some slaves to Washington on occasion, but never Sally.

Thomas Jefferson died silent in 1826. A half-century later, Madison Hemings told a story to a newspaper editor that his mother Sally had told him that he and all his brothers and sisters were the children of the President of the United States.

MADISON WAS ANGRY at the world. His skin was pale; in white neighborhoods he was called "colored"; in black neighborhoods he was shunned as an "almost" white man. Sally did not tell her son that she had children by another white man, Samuel Carr.

True? Untrue? Historians are unable to decide. The steps of the White House are snowy. Anyone who stops a moment to look will see dark veins in the marble . . .

Kemo sabe a friend who's all wet

by DICK WEST
(The lighter side)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This month's issue of Smithsonian magazine contains a scholarly article on the vast amount of research that has gone into trying to establish what Tonto, the Lone Ranger's faithful Indian companion, meant by the salutation "kemo sabe."

Francis Striker, who created the original radio serial, apparently never revealed the secret. That left it up to linguists, anthropologists and other specialists to solve the mystery.

Thus far, none has come up with anything conclusive.

LONE RANGER fans generally took "kemo sabe" to mean "faithful friend" or something of that sort. But the magazine says that interpretation does not square with any known Indian dialect.

Probably the closest to it are the Tewa Indian words "kema," meaning "friend," and "sabe," meaning "Apache."

It seems unlikely Tonto would address the masked rider as "friend Apache." Despite the mask, Tonto surely could discern that the Lone Ranger was not a fellow Indian.

One theory is that "kemo sabe" was based on the Yavapai Indian word "kinmisaba," meaning "one who is white." That seems out of character.

TONTO SIMPLY wasn't the type who would use a term that apparently is the Yavapai equivalent of "honky."

The Smithsonian also speculates that "kemo sabe" was not Indian talk at all but a corruption of the Spanish "el quien lo sabe" ("the one who knows").

That theory won't wash either.

While Tonto might conceivably have credited the Lone Ranger with omniscience, it should be noted that the traditional corruption of "sabe" is "savvy."

WHY WOULD TONTO have corrupted "quien" as "kemo" and not "sabe" as "savvy?" Clearly this field of research is still wide open.

Pending some sort of definitive finding by the scholars, Lone Ranger fans are free to form their own theories. Here's mine:

I can recall many situations in which the masked man took courses of action that any prudent Indian companion would have regarded as unsound.

So when Tonto uttered lines such as "turn back, kemo sabe," I suspect he was commenting on the Lone Ranger's mentality.

THIS THEORY IS based on the fact that Tonto pronounced "sabe" to sound a great deal like "sobby." My dictionary defines "sobby" as "saturated with moisture" or "related to weeping."

Okay. The Lone Ranger was the macho type. "Daring and resourceful," the radio described him. Certainly not the type who easily bursts into tears.

But he might well have impressed Tonto as someone who was frequently "saturated with moisture."

In other words, I'm convinced that "kemo sabe" was not a corruption of "el quien lo sabe" in the sense of "the one who knows" but rather in the sense of "the one who is all wet."

Library tax vote draws opposition

On Oct. 1 Mount Prospect residents have been asked to approve a referendum to increase our property taxes by $850,000, which would be used to increase book purchases by the public library. The referendum, if passed, would increase the library's share of the property tax assessment by 13.4 cents per $100 of assessed evaluation. A spokesman for the library board says this will increase the average homeowner's taxes by only $11 a year. This is, however, at present levels of assessment. As property values go up, and reassessments occur, this $11 figure will also go up!

Ask yourself how often you use the library? How many times have you been there in the last year? You may think we need a better library for our children's use but aren't we already providing them with libraries in their schools? While most residents in the village have library cards, it is in reality a small percentage of people who actually use it regularly. The rest of us are subsidizing their reading. What would their reaction be if we asked them to provide more money to pay for our hobbies? Would you expect every taxpayer in Mount Prospect to pay for your and my golf clubs, televisions, or record albums?

It is seldom that we can do anything about rising taxes. We now have an opportunity, here in Mount Prospect to strike a blow against ever increasing taxation. I hope you will join with me on October 1 and vote no on the library referendum.

A BIG assessment jump is expected for houses in Elk Grove Township, similar to the 28 per cent boost in Wheeling Township, says Charles Hodlmair, Elk Grove Township assessor, in the Sept. 20 Daily Herald.

That includes Mount Prospect property owners. Think about that when you, hopefully, go to vote Saturday, October 1 on the library's request for an increase of 13 cents per $100 assessed valuation of your property. They also want an $850,000 bond issue for an instant library full of books, phonograph records, tapes, etc. The bond issue will also become our bill plus interest.

Our library officials like you, I and industry must learn to live within our means. We just cannot afford to give them everything at once. It will come in time with efficient, and economy minded management.

I recommend a NO vote on both library requests.

'Stop Elk Grove abortion clinic'

I am appalled at the possibility of a profit-making abortion clinic opening in Elk Grove Village. As a rule these clinics have unsavory reputations. There is an enormous difference between having an abortion in a hospital and having the procedure done in a profit-making abortion clinic. For the most part this difference pertains to the safety of the women involved, but such an establishment can also be a detriment to the community.

In a profit-making abortion clinic any "licensed physician" can do abortions whether he is qualified or not. Advertising by such clinics is routine whereas, if a legitimate surgeon were to advertise by radio, newspaper or mail he would lose his license. The record keeping in such clinics is minimal to virtually non-existant; complications are commonly not reported. If a physician has too many complications resulting, there may be no way to stop him.

In these clinics human tissue is treated like garbage; the bodies of the babies killed in abortions end up in the garbage can or down the garbage disposal unit.

In profit-making clinics the woman is usually sent home only a few hours after the procedure without any follow-up care; after she leaves she is on her own. Although from 2 to 12 per cent of women having suction abortions bleed badly enough to need blood transfusions, it is rare to have such services quickly available at a clinic.

It has been my impression that these clinics and the doctors working in them are primarily interested in making a fast fortune. It is not unusual for an average doctor working full time doing abortions to make $250,000 per year, cash at the door.

I can think of no way in which such an establishment would benefit our community, and I encourage village officials to take these matters into consideration.

On afterburn

I appreciate Eleanor Rives' two-part story on the survivors of the Holocaust. If it is true, as Minna Davis suggests, that we are going to be hearing more about the "afterburn" of the Holocaust, the effect on the lives of those who lived through it, then it is also true that we who did not live through it will have to come to terms with it in some way. For surely the Holocaust is the central religious fact of my generation (as Vietnam may be for a younger one.) Anything we think about religious life has to take this terrible historical fact into consideration.

The fact of the Holocaust makes a split in our religious thinking just as surely as it makes the split that Minna Davis describes in her psychic life.

Open primary deserves vote

The Coalition for Political Honesty has begun a petition drive for an advisory referendum on the open primary issue.

The coalition, which most recently fought for three "political honesty" amendments to the Illinois Constitution, hopes to put the question on the November, 1978, election ballot. To do so, it must gather 625,000 signatures by next August.

The coalition's drive deserves support. Although the results of such a referendum would only be advisory, a vote would give Illinois voters the chance to pressure legislators for a more open political process.

Primaries in Illinois have traditionally been "closed." In order to vote in a primary, an Illinois voter must request either a Republican or Democratic ballot and his choice becomes a matter of public record.

The open primary, which is law in Wisconsin, allows the voter to make his party choice in the privacy of the voting booth. No one but the individual voter knows which party's ballot he or she casts.

Opponents of open primaries say the primary is for party members to choose their candidates and argue that a secret ballot selection would lead to members of the opposite party crossing over for weak candidates to oppose their own "favorites" in the general election.

The objection ignores the fact that the danger of crossover voting is minimal compared to the dangers that already exist with the closed primary.

A voter's primary voting record can be used against him by a party in office. This is especially dangerous in an area where a single, well-organized party dominates, as it does in Chicago.

In those cases, political workers who know how individuals vote can selectively influence the services they receive — or don't receive — from government.

The primary election should not be viewed as a private matter in which only the party faithful have a right to choose candidates. The primary is paid for by all taxpayers and all taxpayers have a right to participate in the voting.

Any law that discourages participation in the elective process is a bad law. The requirement that people "declare a party" is such a law.

The Coalition for Political Honesty has already made efforts at collecting signatures in Des Plaines and Palatine. They will be back. Their petitions deserve support.

I'll solemnly oppose open primaries knowing that political parties, not voters, should select candidates!

Bar to women wrong

In a period where the contribution of women in all walks of life is being increasingly recognized, John Wasylik has the right idea.

Wasylik is national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and he has proposed that the organization reconsider a bylaw change to admit women to full membership. The rule change will be voted on next August.

Wasylik says he believes as many as 100,000 of the nation's half million women veterans would be eligible for membership under the VFW's traditional criteria — service overseas in a combat zone. And he sees no reason to continue the artificial exclusion of women, who otherwise qualify, from membership in the group.

Several local VFW members, upon reflection, agreed with Wasylik's contention, even though their initial reaction — which feminists would label "male chauvenist" — was to label the ideal "ridiculous."

It might comfort the macho fantasies of some VFW members to continue the fiction that no women have served in combat zones. But as Wasylik said, many male veterans owe their lives to Army and Navy nurses — women — who did not bear arms but who nevertheless risked sudden death.

Changing the VFW's outmoded rule against women makes sense. And once that issue is out of the way, VFW members, both male and female, can get on with efforts to prove their organization relevant to the present day.

"I understand everywhere the President's task force pushing the new canal treaties goes, he follows!"

The White House endured a Jefferson era scandal

Jim Bishop

The dark stain of scandal has been scrubbed from the White House steps before. The lonely intellectual, Thomas Jefferson, died without denying that his slave, Sally Hemings, had been his mistress and that he had fathered several of her children.

He would not deign to deny. The tall, stately redhead had written the Declaration of Independence at the age of 33. There was no mountain of knowledge of philosophy he had not climbed. When he entered the White House in 1800, his calm brow was above intrigue.

Jefferson's mistake may have been that he read one book too many. It was "The Political Progress of Britain," by James Callender. The President was delighted to find that Callender, an immigrant American, looked upon British statesmen as ruffians, swindlers, murderers and mercenaries.

THOMAS JEFFERSON saw Callender as a "man of genius — in his coarse way." The statesman met the muckraker in Philadelphia and introduced him to publishers. Callender's first American book "exposed" Alexander Hamilton, Secretary of the Treasury, as a man involved in corrupt practices, one who reveled in an illicit affair with Mrs. James Reynolds.

The third President of the United States read it on his vast estate at Monticello, Virginia. He was surprised that Hamilton admitted the "affair," but denied stealing. Jefferson felt no warning shudder.

The third book called George Washington "a scandalous hypocrite," one who has "authorized the robbery and ruin of his own army." When Jefferson became president, his protege demanded to be appointed postmaster of Richmond, or he would "tell all." The friendship ended.

Jefferson refused. In 1802, Callender got a job on a scandal sheet called "The Richmond Recorder: or Ladys' and Gentlemen's Miscellany." He wrote an article accusing the President of being involved with two or more women, one of whom was a slave, Sally Hemings. The writer had never been to Monticello, and had never met Miss Hemings, but he described her as "The African Venus." The President, he said, was not fit to be in the company of respectable citizens. No woman, white or black, was safe from Jefferson.

VIRGINIA WAS stunned. The President refused to entertain questions about his conduct. No newspaper sent a reporter to the White House or to Monticello to prove or disprove the story.

Among the many slaves on the plantation, Sally was favored. When Jefferson was ambassador to France, he sent for his daughter Mary and ordered Sally to accompany the child.

Sally's mother was Betty Hemings. She was the property of Colonel Wayles of Virginia. Slaves testified that the colonel fathered many children — some said 14 — by Betty Hemings. Jefferson married the colonel's daughter Martha.

When the old man died, Thomas Jefferson inherited the colonel's slaves. If the Wayles story is true, Betty Heming's children were half-brothers and half-sisters to Mrs. Jefferson.

SALLY WAS ONE of the children. Scandal stains with an unseen brush. Jefferson's biographers — among them the noted Professor John C. Miller — concede that Jefferson never ordered Betty Heming's children to work in the fields. All of them, including Sally, were household servants.

Whatever the President's consuming passion for Sally, or lack of it he risked the presidency in 1804 by leaving the White House as frequently as possible to be with "my children and grandchildren." He brought some slaves to Washington on occasion, but never Sally.

Thomas Jefferson died silent in 1826. A half-century later, Madison Hemings told a story to a newspaper editor that his mother Sally had told him that he and all his brothers and sisters were the children of the President of the United States.

MADISON WAS ANGRY at the world. His skin was pale; in white neighborhoods he was called "colored"; in black neighborhoods he was shunned as an "almost" white man. Sally did not tell her son that she had children by another white man, Samuel Carr.

True? Untrue? Historians are unable to decide. The steps of the White House are snowy. Anyone who stops a moment to look will see dark veins in the marble . . .

Kemo sabe a friend who's all wet

by DICK WEST
(The lighter side)

WASHINGTON (UPI) — This month's issue of Smithsonian magazine contains a scholarly article on the vast amount of research that has gone into trying to establish what Tonto, the Lone Ranger's faithful Indian companion, meant by the salutation "kemo sabe."

Francis Striker, who created the original radio serial, apparently never revealed the secret. That left it up to linguists, anthropologists and other specialists to solve the mystery.

Thus far, none has come up with anything conclusive.

LONE RANGER fans generally took "kemo sabe" to mean "faithful friend" or something of that sort. But the magazine says that interpretation does not square with any known Indian dialect.

Probably the closest to it are the Tewa Indian words "kema," meaning "friend," and "sabe," meaning "Apache."

It seems unlikely Tonto would address the masked rider as "friend Apache." Despite the mask, Tonto surely could discern that the Lone Ranger was not a fellow Indian.

One theory is that "kemo sabe" was based on the Yavapai Indian word "kinmisaba," meaning "one who is white." That seems out of character.

TONTO SIMPLY wasn't the type who would use a term that apparently is the Yavapai equivalent of "honky."

The Smithsonian also speculates that "kemo sabe" was not Indian talk at all but a corruption of the Spanish "el quien lo sabe" ("the one who knows").

That theory won't wash either.

While Tonto might conceivably have credited the Lone Ranger with omniscience, it should be noted that the traditional corruption of "sabe" is "savvy."

WHY WOULD TONTO have corrupted "quien" as "kemo" and not "sabe" as "savvy?" Clearly this field of research is still wide open.

Pending some sort of definitive finding by the scholars, Lone Ranger fans are free to form their own theories. Here's mine:

I can recall many situations in which the masked man took courses of action that any prudent Indian companion would have regarded as unsound.

So when Tonto uttered lines such as "turn back, kemo sabe," I suspect he was commenting on the Lone Ranger's mentality.

THIS THEORY IS based on the fact that Tonto pronounced "sabe" to sound a great deal like "sobby." My dictionary defines "sobby" as "saturated with moisture" or "related to weeping."

Okay. The Lone Ranger was the macho type. "Daring and resourceful," the radio described him. Certainly not the type who easily bursts into tears.

But he might well have impressed Tonto as someone who was frequently "saturated with moisture."

In other words, I'm convinced that "kemo sabe" was not a corruption of "el quien lo sabe" in the sense of "the one who knows" but rather in the sense of "the one who is all wet."

Israel may feel its best bet is to make grievances public

by DANIEL SOUTHERLAND

Israel, on the diplomatic offensive, is bringing its admittedly wide differences with the United States into the open.

When Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin came to Washington two months ago, he accused the press of exaggerating U.S.-Israeli differences. That also was his contention when U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance visited Israel last month.

But now Israel's Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan has visited the U.S. — making no attempt to hide what he describes as the "wide gaps" that exist between the U.S. and Israel over the essentials of a final Middle East settlement.

Menahem Begin

SOME OBSERVERS see in Dayan's remarks an implicit threat of a public battle with President Carter, with the help of the powerful pro-Israel lobby in the United States, at a time when much of Carter's "political capital" is being expended to secure ratification of a new Panama Canal treaty.

The Israelis might argue that going around Carter and appealing directly to the American public — and the Jewish community in particular — would be fair because Carter once threatened to go directly to the Israeli public if he felt Israel's leaders were blocking attempt to secure a settlement.

In an interview with Time magazine last month, President Carter said that should a "particular leader" — and here he clearly meant Prime Minister Begin — find his position on a peace settlement in direct opposition to the position of the other parties, the President would try to marshal behind him public opinion around the world, including that of the leader standing in opposition to him. This was seen as a clear threat to go around Begin to his own people should he oppose a settlement agreed upon by the U.S., the Arabs, and the Soviet Union.

SINCE THAT THREAT was uttered, the differences between the United States and Israel have grown more acute, even as the United States appeared to be narrowing some of its differences with the Arabs over how to approach both a peace conference and a final Middle East settlement.

Israel has been thrown on the defensive by this narrowing of differences between the Arabs and Americans, but the United States' increasing emphasis on the "Palestinian question," and by some behind-the-scenes questioning within the American Jewish community of the apparently hard-line policies of Prime Minister Begin on new West Bank settlements.

In a press conference following his talks here with President Carter and Secretary of State Vance, Foreign Minister Dayan stressed a new theme of apparent flexibility on the settlements question. He said that it is not the setlements that will determine where future borders will be located, but negotiated borders that will determine which settlements are to remain and which are to be removed. Dayan also reaffirmed Israel's willingness to allow Palestinians to participate in a Jordanian peace delegation without asking whether those Palestinians were "sympathizers of the PLO" (the Palestine Liberation Organization).

BUT WHEN IT came to U.S. and Arab proposals for the establishment of a "Palestinian homeland" based on an Israeli withdrawal from occupied territories, it was clear, according to Dayan, that the U.S and Israel find themselves at odds. If Dayan's comments were an indication, the U.S. is sticking to its position that Israel should withdraw from the West Bank of the Jordan, up to the 1967 lines, with only "minor" territorial modifications to be allowed for Israel's defenses.

Foreign Minister Dayan is reported to have brought with him to Washington a detailed draft peace treaty, a letter offering a substantial withdrawal of Israeli forces from the Sinai Peninsula as well as an extremely limited withdrawal from part of the Golan Heights, and proposals to offer "substantial autonomy" — within Israeli military control — to the Arabs living on the West Bank.

Israeli sources hint that this eventually would lead to some measure of Jordanian-Israeli cooperation on the West Bank. The question of formal sovereignty over the West Bank, they say, would be left open for further negotiation.

All this is not likely to please the Arabs — or the United States — given the Arab preference for an Israeli withdrawl from most if not all of the West Bank. But Israeli sources contend that "some elements" of Foreign Minister Dayan's proposals, while not likely to gain immediate acceptance, offer possibilities for future modification and negotiation.

Cuban refugees arrive in Florida

Nineteen American families with Cuban dependents, released as a "humanitarian gesture" by Fidel Castro, arrived at Homestead Air Force Base, Fla. from Havana Thursday on a charter flight that had to dodge two Air Force jets before landing safely. The chartered Eastern Airline 727 had to abort its landing to make way for two Air Force F-4 Phantom jets "scrambled" to intercept an unidentified plane that penetrated the Air Defense Zone. Joseph Argon, sent by President Carter to greet the refugees, said the flight "is the first in what we hope will be a series of similar humanitarian actions on the part of the government of Cuba."

Miami area's water contaminated

Florida — Health officials ordered residents of a large northeast Dade County area Thursday not to use tap water because it was contaminated with pesticides. Officials said sabotage of the water supply in the area was possibility and asked the state attorney to investigate. The municipally-owned North Miami Beach Utility Co. shut down its fresh water supply system, which covers an area of about 35 square miles and serves an estimated 20,000 persons. Officials said laboratory analysis showed at least four toxic pesticides present in the water supply.

Ford hits war power restraints

Former President Gerald Ford Thursday criticized restraints on presidential war powers, saying when he needed Congress in the Vietnam War its members were everywhere but Washington. Congress was in Easter recess during the 1975 evacuation of DaNang, Ford said in a political science lecture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. He said he tried to notify the bipartisan leadership but found key members in Mexico, Greece, the Middle East, Europe and the People's Republic of China.

"That's a problem when you want to order a certain military operation," he said, adding that the War Powers Resolution is impractical and should be rescinded by Congress. On other subjects, Ford said another Middle East war would lead to an Arab oil embargo that would have "a devastating effect" on the United States' economy. Another embargo would bring rationing, price increases and stiff conservation measures and would be much worse than the 1973 embargo because the United States now imports more crude oil, he said.

Hungarian plane crash kills 29

A Hungarian Malev airliner crashed Wednesday while attempting to make an emergency landing at Bucharest, killing 29 of the 53 persons aboard, the Romanian government announced Thursday. In addition to the eight-member Hungarian crew, the dead included 12 passengers from Hungary, four from West Germany and five from Turkey, according to the Romanian civil aviation department.

Mideast forces prepare during Yom Kippur lull

Beirut, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli and Palestinian troops dug in positions Thursday on two opposite hilltops as thousands of residents turned villages into ghost towns overnight fleeing the southern border war zone.

Little fighting was reported Thursday on the Jewish holiday of Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement and holiest day on the Jewish calendar.

Newsmen in south Lebanon said Israeli troops spent the day digging in positions on Nabi el-Aouedi hill, which overlooks a no-man's land between their lines and Palestinian positions.

ON THEIR SIDE, Palestinian and Lebanese leftist forces moved artillery into the 800-year-old Beaufort Castle, across the plain.

The ancient crusader castle, once one of Lebanon's most famous tourist attractions, used to guard the traditional trading routes from the Biblical port cities of Tyre and Sidon through the Lebanese mountains to Damascus.

The castle, which one historian said stands "like an eagle's nest" some 1,500 feet above the Litani River, was built by King Fulk, crusader king of Jerusalem, in 1135 on a site earlier used by the Romans.

In the only fighting reported, scattered overnight shelling from Christian forces killed two persons and wounded five others in the Palestinian town of Rachaya al-Foukhar, Palestinian and leftist sources said.

But an official at the Palestinian news agency Wafa said "there has been no fresh activity on the ground and we are not aware of the new Israeli movements."

U.S. to allow arms accord to expire; talks continue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Sec. of State Cyrus Vance said Thursday the United States will allow the 1972 U.S.-Soviet strategic arms accord to expire Oct. 3, but will abide by its provisions as negotiations continue with Russia.

Vance said U.S. observance of the pact's provisions was conditional on Russia similarly exercising restraint.

Vance made the disclosure in a letter to Sen. John Sparkman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, as he met with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in a new round of talks on strategic arms limits.

AFTER A FIRST five-hour session, both ministers acknowledged to reporters at the State Dept. the search for a new Soviet-American strategic arms limitations lasting through 1985 remains beset by problems.

They agreed to meet again in the late afternoon to discuss the Middle East situation. Gromyko meets President Carter Friday morning.

"The main (strategic arms) issues remain unresolved. Those are the issues we are addressing," Vance said.

Gromyko added: "We waded into the stream and have not emerged. There were lots of rocks. When we will get out I cannot say. I urge patience. We want to see success in the talks."

UNRESOLVED ISSUES in the arms talks:

- The Soviet Union is trying to restrain America's development of air launched cruise missiles.
- The United States is trying to restrain Soviet heavy missiles equipped with multiple warheads.
- The United States wants constraints on the deployment of the Soviet Backfire bomber.
- No agreement has been reached on how to monitor compliance with any restraints which might be placed on cruise missiles.

"I think this place is bugged!"

Foreign competition forces more layoffs of U.S. steel workers

The specter of foreign steel imports led two more major U.S. steel producers to announce layoffs of nearly 1,000 workers.

Approximately 600 workers will be laid off by Armco Steel Co., Middletown, Ohio; U.S. Steel Corp. will lay off 200 workers at its Youngstown, Ohio, facility and 150 at its Pittsburgh facilities.

"Imports have hurt us in getting the prices we need to make a profit but so has poor quality. The cost of energy and raw material and, of course, labor have each added to the upward pressure on prices," said C. G. Kramer, an Armco official.

"Foreign-produced transmission towers are entering the country at an alarming rate and are saturating the domestic market," a U.S. Steel spokesman said in explaining the layoffs in Pittsburgh.

A. U. S. Steel spokesman in Cleveland said about 200 workers would be laid off next week at two rolling mills in Youngstown because of "a lack of orders." The affected Youngstown facilities produce strip steel and special bar sections.

But steel mill shutdowns and layoffs have not convinced President Carter the industry needs more protection from foreign competition.

SEN. JOHN HEINZ, R-Pa., said Carter had confided his concern about the issue to a group of Senate Republicans. But Heinz added the President was "not convinced that any particular action is called for at this time."

Carter nonetheless agreed to meet steel labor and management leaders in the "not too distant future" to discuss demands for tighter restraints on foreign steel imports.

Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.'s decision this week to close an Ohio mill and lay off 5,000 workers sparked a new industry campaign for restraints. Thousands of other steelworkers have been laid off in recent months.

United Steelworkers President Lloyd McBride told a Washington meeting Wednesday his union will participate in an active campaign to win higher tariffs on steel imports — both from Carter and the Congress.

"PEOPLE ASK ME what can we do about Youngstown?" McBride said. "Unless we can convince this administration that we have a serious problem, I don't know what we can do."

Without tighter restrictions on imports, Americans will witness "the finish" of their steel industry, he said.

"We could well find ourselves in the same situation with steel that we now have with oil," he said.

Heinz said Carter expressed concern about shutdowns.

Industry leaders believe Congress may split with the Carter administration on the imports and pollution questions.

Carter and his special trade ambassador, Robert Strauss, claim if the United States were to take action against imports, foreign countries would reciprocate in other markets.

U.S. STEEL CORP. Tuesday formally sought higher tariffs in a petition filed with the Treasury Dept. that accused six major Japanese steel firms with "dumping" — illegally selling steel here at reduced prices.

A Japanese foreign ministry spokesman said Thursday the problem of steel exports should be settled on a global basis and deplored U.S. Steel Corp.'s filing of dumping charges against the Japanese steel industry.

The spokesman, Kensuke Yanagiya, said Japan would decide its response to the U.S. Steel action after it has studied the formal complaint which was filed Wednesday.

YANAGIYA SAID Japan is holding talks with the United States and other member countries of the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development "to stabilize extension of steel produce exports on a global basis."

"It is difficult to understand why U.S. Steel should have brought the case to the court at such a time," Yanagiya said. "Such legal action could cause an obstacle to the over-all settlement of the U.S.-Japan problem.

"We fear it may encourage a climate of protectionism in the U.S. and create an obstacle to the over-all settlement of the world steel trade problem."

Business briefs

'Slowing economy engulfs country'

An economic slowdown has engulfed the country, said Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal, but things are looking up for the rest of the year. At the same time, Blumenthal hinted that perhaps President Carter's goal of a balanced budget by 1981 would not be met. Blumenthal testified before a Senate Finance Subcommittee to ask for an increase in the current national debt ceiling from $700 billion to $775 billion for the next year. But much of the questioning was about economic conditions. "Clearly there has been a slowdown," Blumenthal said in answer to a question. But he said the slowdown was not entirely unexpected and that the administration still expects "pretty good growth" in the last three months of this year and into 1978.

Air fares could go lower still

More shots were fired Thursday in the ongoing airline price wars. United Airlines said it will file with the Civil Aeronautics Board a proposal to offer round trip excursion fares to Las Vegas from Chicago and five other U.S. cities effective Dec. 1. Restrictions include 14-day advance purchase and two-to-30-day lengths of stay. The proposed fare would reduce the cost of a round-trip flight between Chicago and Las Vegas from $288 to $159 on Tuesdays and Wednesdays; $189 on Fridays and Mondays, and $209 on Thursdays and Sundays. Saturday travel from November through May would be $159 and from June to October, $189. In London the Civil Aviation Authority Thursday gave Laker Airways permission to sell no-frills tickets for its new "Skytrain" transatlantic service both in central London and at the airport. Laker had filed a request to sell its $103 London-New York tickets in central London to be more competitive with new cheap fares offered by major international airlines. British Airways, TWA and Air India have already begun selling cheap $111 one-way standby tickets both at London's Heathrow Airport and at Victoria terminal in the center of the capital. "We are also looking at Victoria Terminal at the moment," the Laker spokesman said.

Angry farmers threaten to strike

Agriculture Sec. Bob Bergland met with 3,000 angry farmers from two dozen states Thursday who warned him they wanted a break-even price for crops or they would abandon their tractors and plows in a nationwide strike. "The farmer pays 51 per cent of the taxes in this country and buys 51 per cent of the merchandise," said George Whitman, a farmer from Colorado's Weld County. "I know how to carry water. I'll plant a garden, and let those people die in the cities." Bergland discarded his coat and tie and stood in the middle of a stage at the Pueblo (Colo.) Memorial Hall. Farmer after farmer told him they had to receive more money for their crops. The farmers, many of whom drove to the site in tractors and trucks, threatened to strike later this year unless Congress guarantees a break-even price for their crops.

Fewer late mortgage payments

The percentage of homeowners making late home mortgage payments dropped in August to the lowest level in more than three years, the U.S. League of Savings Associations said Thursday. The league estimated mortgage delinquencies at 0.78, down from 0.87 per cent in July and the lowest rate since 0.78 per cent in June, 1774.

Bank annouces 20c dividend

At their regular September meeting the Board of Directors of the First National Bank of Des Plaines declared a regular consecutive dividend of 20 cents per share payable Sept. 16 to shareholders on record Sept. 12.

Dow falls 1.82 in slow trading

NEW YRRK (UPI) — Blue-chip stocks fell to a 21-month low Thursday in reaction to Bert Lance's resignation, prospects of a surge in the nation's money supply and concern about the economy. Trading was slow.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down nearly 5 points at the outset, dropped 1.82 points to 839.14, the lowest level since it closed at 838.63 Dec. 22, 1975.

The Dow plunged 10.82 points Wednesday as Lance announced his resignation as President Carter's budget director.

The New York Stock Exchange index finished unchanged at 52.08, the lowest level since it closed at 51.97 Jan. 22, 1976. There was no change in the average price of a share.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, lost 0.01 to 95.09, the lowest level since it closed at 94.95 Jan. 9, 1976.

Declines topped advances, 736 to 572, among the 1,821 issues crossing the composite tape.

Big Board volume totaled 16,660,000 shares, down from the 22,200,000 traded Wednesday, the busiest day in nearly eight weeks.

Bonds becoming wise investments

Jane Bryant Quinn
Staying ahead

NEW YORK — It's an outside chance, but still a good bet, that one of the more profitable investments in the years ahead will be old-fashioned bonds — corporate bonds, government bonds, municipal bonds and the mutual funds and investment trusts that specialize in each.

If this happens, it will signal a tremendous change in investment assumptions. Years of inflation have wiped out the value of interest received on older bonds. Persons who bought bonds many years ago have seen a third or more of their capital wiped out.

But a number of market observers are ready to argue that the worm has turned. The future value of bonds hinges very much on the direction of inflation. Although consumer prices still are increasing, the rise is much slower than it used to be. Wholesale industrial prices have been weakening for four years.

EVEN IF INFLATION speeds up again toward the end of the year, as some economists predict, the odds are against its returning to the double-digit peaks of 1974.

If this view is wrong, bonds will continue to be poor investments. But if it's right, bonds will be winners for investors willing to hold for the long term.

In understanding the bond market, there are two main elements to consider: the price of the bond itself and the interest rate (or coupon) it pays. In today's market, a high-quality corporate bond sold by a company for $1,000 might carry an interest rate of 8 per cent, or $80 a year.

If long-term interest rates move up, as they do when inflation increases, the next bonds the company sells may come out at 8.5 per cent, or $85 a year for every $1,000 purchase. But what happens to the older bonds already held by investors?

THE VALUE OF those bonds will fall, from the $1,000 you paid to perhaps $960 on a 30-year bond, says Robert C. Peck Jr., manager of fixed-income research for Merrill Lynch. The bond still pays $80 a year, but $80 on a $960 investment gives a yield close to 8.5 per cent, which is the going market rate. If someone buys that older bond for $960 and holds it until maturity, he'll be able to redeem it for $1,000 — a capital gain of $40. The value of that gain also is figured into the yield. The rule, then, is that when interest rates rise, bond prices fall.

On the other hand, if long-term interest rates fall, as they do when inflation slows, the value of bonds moves up.

If new bonds are coming out at 7.5 per cent, the price of that older long-term bond may rise from $1,000 to around $1,035 because an $80 interest payment on a $1,035 investment is close to 7.5 per cent — the current market yield. If the bond is held to maturity and redeemed for $1,000 the person who buys for $1,035 will take a $35 loss. But that loss is also figured into the yield. Other technical items affect total yield, but these are the key things.

IF YOU BUY bonds today and it turns out that inflation and interest rates do indeed fall over the long run, you'll profit two ways: (1) You'll have locked in several years of high interest income that won't be available from newer bonds, and (2) Your bonds will rise in price, so they can be sold for a capital gain.

Of course, if inflation jumps back to 10 or 12 per cent, today's bonds will fall considerably in value. That's the risk you take.

But every great inflation has always come to an end — in fits and starts, but slowly, gradually sputtering out. An investment in bonds today is a bet that we're on the downside of the inflation cycle.

Foreign competition forces more layoffs of U.S. steel workers

The specter of foreign steel imports led two more major U.S. steel producers to announce layoffs of nearly 1,000 workers.

Approximately 600 workers will be laid off by Armco Steel Co., Middletown, Ohio; U.S. Steel Corp. will lay off 200 workers at its Youngstown, Ohio, facility and 150 at its Pittsburgh facilities.

"Imports have hurt us in getting the prices we need to make a profit but so has poor quality. The cost of energy and raw material and, of course, labor have each added to the upward pressure on prices," said C. G. Kramer, an Armco official.

"Foreign-produced transmission towers are entering the country at an alarming rate and are saturating the domestic market," a U.S. Steel spokesman said in explaining the layoffs in Pittsburgh.

A. U. S. Steel spokesman in Cleveland said about 200 workers would be laid off next week at two rolling mills in Youngstown because of "a lack of orders." The affected Youngstown facilities produce strip steel and special bar sections.

But steel mill shutdowns and layoffs have not convinced President Carter the industry needs more protection from foreign competition.

SEN. JOHN HEINZ, R-Pa., said Carter had confided his concern about the issue to a group of Senate Republicans. But Heinz added the President was "not convinced that any particular action is called for at this time."

Carter nonetheless agreed to meet steel labor and management leaders in the "not too distant future" to discuss demands for tighter restraints on foreign steel imports.

Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co.'s decision this week to close an Ohio mill and lay off 5,000 workers sparked a new industry campaign for restraints. Thousands of other steelworkers have been laid off in recent months.

United Steelworkers President Lloyd McBride told a Washington meeting Wednesday his union will participate in an active campaign to win higher tariffs on steel imports — both from Carter and the Congress.

"PEOPLE ASK ME what can we do about Youngstown?" McBride said. "Unless we can convince this administration that we have a serious problem, I don't know what we can do."

Without tighter restrictions on imports, Americans will witness "the finish" of their steel industry, he said.

"We could well find ourselves in the same situation with steel that we now have with oil," he said.

Heinz said Carter expressed concern about shutdowns.

Industry leaders believe Congress may split with the Carter administration on the imports and pollution questions.

Carter and his special trade ambassador, Robert Strauss, claim if the United States were to take action against imports, foreign countries would reciprocate in other markets.

U.S. STEEL CORP. Tuesday formally sought higher tariffs in a petition filed with the Treasury Dept. that accused six major Japanese steel firms with "dumping" — illegally selling steel here at reduced prices.

A Japanese foreign ministry spokesman said Thursday the problem of steel exports should be settled on a global basis and deplored U.S. Steel Corp.'s filing of dumping charges against the Japanese steel industry.

The spokesman, Kensuke Yanagiya, said Japan would decide its response to the U.S. Steel action after it has studied the formal complaint which was filed Wednesday.

YANAGIYA SAID Japan is holding talks with the United States and other member countries of the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development "to stabilize extension of steel produce exports on a global basis."

"It is difficult to understand why U.S. Steel should have brought the case to the court at such a time," Yanagiya said. "Such legal action could cause an obstacle to the over-all settlement of the U.S.-Japan problem.

"We fear it may encourage a climate of protectionism in the U.S. and create an obstacle to the over-all settlement of the world steel trade problem."

Business briefs

'Slowing economy engulfs country'

An economic slowdown has engulfed the country, said Treasury Sec. W. Michael Blumenthal, but things are looking up for the rest of the year. At the same time, Blumenthal hinted that perhaps President Carter's goal of a balanced budget by 1981 would not be met. Blumenthal testified before a Senate Finance Subcommittee to ask for an increase in the current national debt ceiling from $700 billion to $775 billion for the next year. But much of the questioning was about economic conditions. "Clearly there has been a slowdown," Blumenthal said in answer to a question. But he said the slowdown was not entirely unexpected and that the administration still expects "pretty good growth" in the last three months of this year and into 1978.

Air fares could go lower still

More shots were fired Thursday in the ongoing airline price wars. United Airlines said it will file with the Civil Aeronautics Board a proposal to offer round trip excursion fares to Las Vegas from Chicago and five other U.S. cities effective Dec. 1. Restrictions include 14-day advance purchase and two-to-30-day lengths of stay. The proposed fare would reduce the cost of a round-trip flight between Chicago and Las Vegas from $288 to $159 on Tuesdays and Wednesdays; $189 on Fridays and Mondays, and $209 on Thursdays and Sundays. Saturday travel from November through May would be $159 and from June to October, $189. In London the Civil Aviation Authority Thursday gave Laker Airways permission to sell no-frills tickets for its new "Skytrain" transatlantic service both in central London and at the airport. Laker had filed a request to sell its $103 London-New York tickets in central London to be more competitive with new cheap fares offered by major international airlines. British Airways, TWA and Air India have already begun selling cheap $111 one-way standby tickets both at London's Heathrow Airport and at Victoria terminal in the center of the capital. "We are also looking at Victoria Terminal at the moment," the Laker spokesman said.

Angry farmers threaten to strike

Agriculture Sec. Bob Bergland met with 3,000 angry farmers from two dozen states Thursday who warned him they wanted a break-even price for crops or they would abandon their tractors and plows in a nationwide strike. "The farmer pays 51 per cent of the taxes in this country and buys 51 per cent of the merchandise," said George Whitman, a farmer from Colorado's Weld County. "I know how to carry water. I'll plant a garden, and let those people die in the cities." Bergland discarded his coat and tie and stood in the middle of a stage at the Pueblo (Colo.) Memorial Hall. Farmer after farmer told him they had to receive more money for their crops. The farmers, many of whom drove to the site in tractors and trucks, threatened to strike later this year unless Congress guarantees a break-even price for their crops.

Fewer late mortgage payments

The percentage of homeowners making late home mortgage payments dropped in August to the lowest level in more than three years, the U.S. League of Savings Associations said Thursday. The league estimated mortgage delinquencies at 0.78, down from 0.87 per cent in July and the lowest rate since 0.78 per cent in June, 1774.

Bank annouces 20c dividend

At their regular September meeting the Board of Directors of the First National Bank of Des Plaines declared a regular consecutive dividend of 20 cents per share payable Sept. 16 to shareholders on record Sept. 12.

Dow falls 1.82 in slow trading

NEW YRRK (UPI) — Blue-chip stocks fell to a 21-month low Thursday in reaction to Bert Lance's resignation, prospects of a surge in the nation's money supply and concern about the economy. Trading was slow.

The Dow Jones industrial average, down nearly 5 points at the outset, dropped 1.82 points to 839.14, the lowest level since it closed at 838.63 Dec. 22, 1975.

The Dow plunged 10.82 points Wednesday as Lance announced his resignation as President Carter's budget director.

The New York Stock Exchange index finished unchanged at 52.08, the lowest level since it closed at 51.97 Jan. 22, 1976. There was no change in the average price of a share.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, lost 0.01 to 95.09, the lowest level since it closed at 94.95 Jan. 9, 1976.

Declines topped advances, 736 to 572, among the 1,821 issues crossing the composite tape.

Big Board volume totaled 16,660,000 shares, down from the 22,200,000 traded Wednesday, the busiest day in nearly eight weeks.

The United Way . . . Boy Scouts united by friendship . . .

United Way drive now under way

Young people at play, senior citizens searching for companionship and the sick looking for help. What do they have in common?

The United Way, suburban arm of the Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy, which annually provides funds to local agencies for local use.

Suburban United Way campaigns are under way in the Northwest suburbs seeking donations from individuals and businesses to help fund a variety of local agencies from the Boy Scouts to the Salvation Army.

THE METROPOLITAN Crusade of Mercy has set a goal of $48.5 million for the 1977 campaign. Money raised in the drive is distributed to communities in proportion to the amount each collects locally.

To help launch the annual fall program, the Crusade of Mercy is sponsoring open houses today throughout the metropolitan area. Visitors will see crusade-supported services in action, including workshops for the handicapped, day care facilities and services for the aged and youth.

Open houses in the Northwest suburbs will include:

- Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged, 800 W. Oakton St., Arington Heights, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.
- Northwest Suburban Council, Boy Scouts of America, 1300 E. Rand Rd., Arlington Heights, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.
- Hoffman Estates Boys Club, 161 Illinois Blvd., Hoffman Estates, 5 to 8 p.m.
- Countryside Center for the handicapped, Shirley Road, Palatine, 9:30 a.m. to noon.
- Palatine Township Senior Citizens Council, 123 N. Plum Grove Rd., Palatine, 7 to 9 p.m.
- Clearbrook Center, 3201 W. Campbell St., Rolling Meadows, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Metropolitan Crusade of Mercy campaign will run through December.

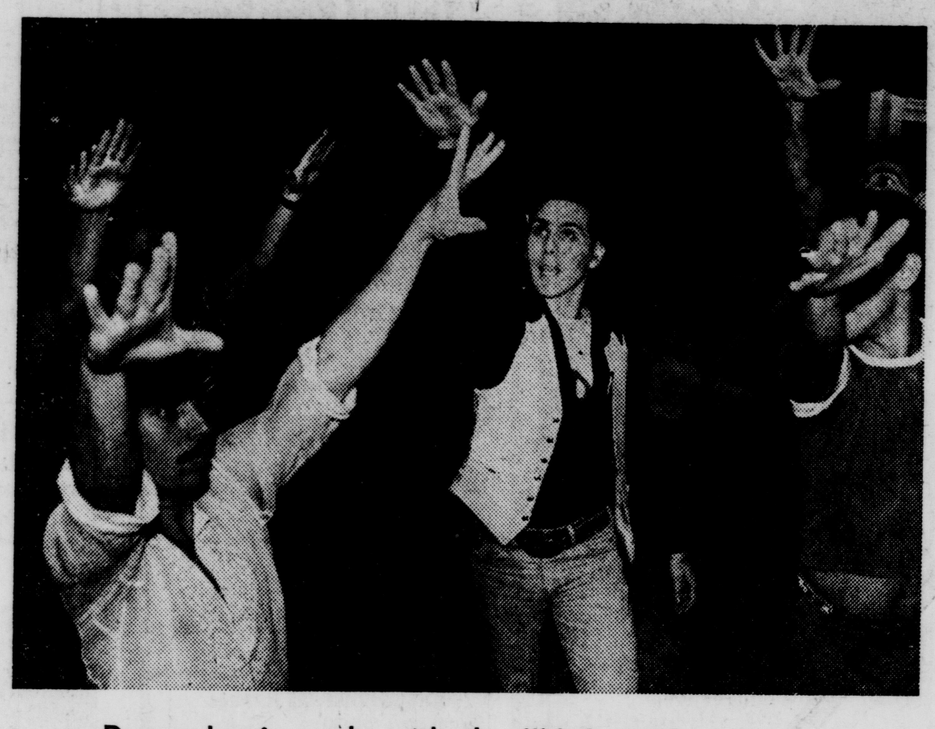
Teaching the Pharaoh to dance



Danny Lewis works with the "Nefertiti" cast on Egyptian movements.

by LYNN ASINOF

"How do you get a Pharaoh to dance?"

That isn't a rhetorical question. It's been a real problem for Danny Lewis, choreographer of the new musical "Nefertiti," which opened Tuesday for a six-week run at the Blackstone Theatre before heading to Broadway.

The show is a musical romance based on events in the life of the legendary Egyptian queen who lived 3,300 years ago. The Egyptian theme is in fashion, but it wasn't an instant winner with Lewis.

"That just made finding a movement very hard," Lewis said of the theme. "There is no Egyptian movement. We don't know how Egyptians moved. All we have are friezes."

SO THAT IS WHERE Lewis started. He collected pictures of Egyptian art and then spent months working with a fellow dancer. Starting with two different frieze positions, they improvised.

"We gave ourselves eight counts to get from here to there," Lewis said. "Then I'd sit back and watch it."

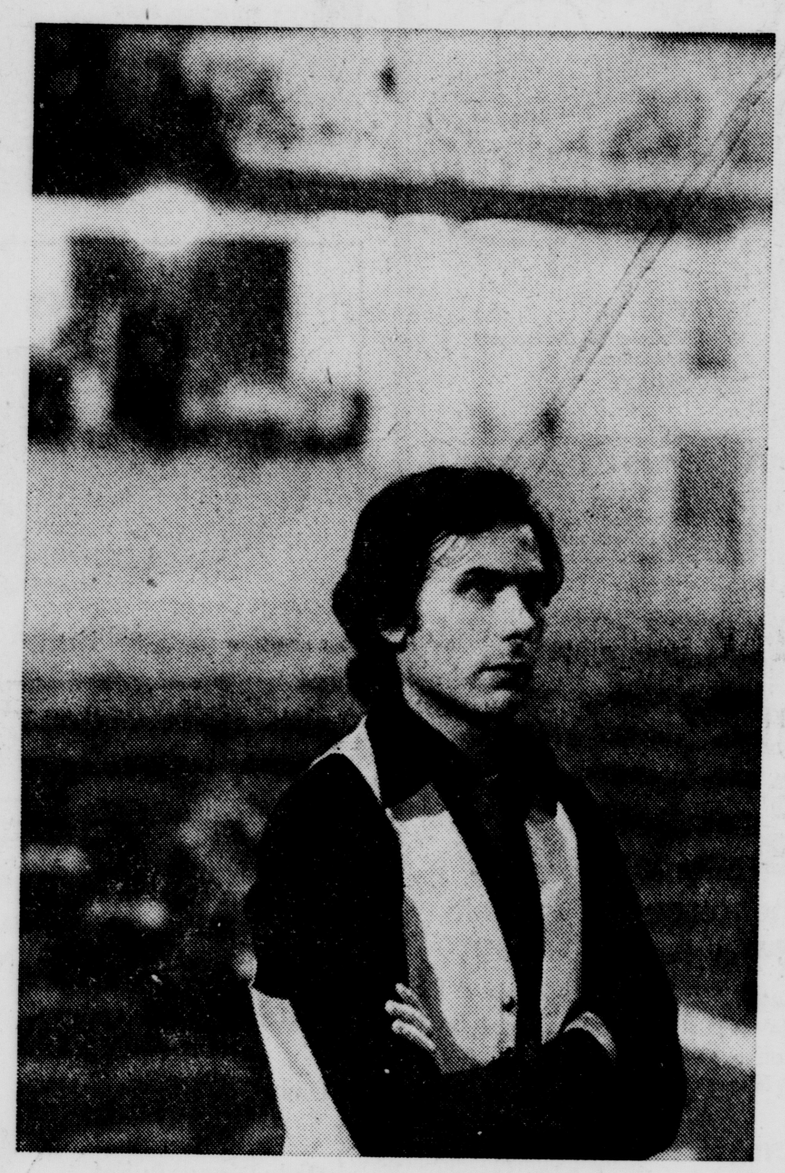
It took Lewis months to come up with a basic vocabulary of movements for the show. And then he had to figure out what to do with them. He still had that basic problem of how to get a Pharaoh to dance, and the solution to that problem wasn't finalized until a week before opening.

The plot revolves around a love triangle involving Nefertiti, the Pharaoh Akhnaton who becomes her husband, and a general who later becomes the Pharaoh Horemhap.

SUCH INTERTWINED relationships are common in Broadway musicals, but Lewis says "Nefertiti" is different from other Broadway shows. And Lewis himself is testimony to that fact — he's never done a Broadway musical.

Trained at Julliard, Lewis' training is classical. He danced with the Jose Limon Company before taking over staging and production work for that modern troupe. He has his own company — the Contemporary Dance System — and has staged works on such august companies as the American Ballet Theatre and the Royal Danish Ballet.

But Lewis, 33, doesn't see much difference between those projects and his current one. "They are both serious. They just have a different vocabulary," he said when asked what a "serious" dancer was doing on Broadway.



Lewis says the choreography in "Nefertiti" is on the same high level as that in "West Side Story" or "Oklahoma." He says the dancing is an integral part of the show, not just some flashy steps thrown in to jazz up the performance.

"The stuff they are doing is really technically hard," he said.

THAT'S ONE REASON why auditions for "Nefertiti" took months. Lewis and others organizing the show demanded people who could not only sing and act, but dance as well.

"We stood our ground. We wanted people who could dance," Lewis said, noting it wasn't easy to find people who could do all three.

A lot of attention was paid to the dance part of the show even in the early planning stages.

"We had a book when we started conceiving the show. As we went through it I would say 'Hey, that's a good spot for a dance number' " Lewis said, noting that allowed the story and dance to develop together.

AND THE CHOREOGRAPHY extends past the dance scenes. "Every song that is done is choreographed. It is not just staged," Lewis said, noting the same holds true for the acting scenes.

For Lewis, the rewards of choreography are greater than those of actually performing. That's why he stopped dancing full-time and began creating dances instead.

"I think I'm tired," Lewis said

Symphony season promises excitement

by BILL GOWEN

One of the most musically-attractive Chicago Symphony Orchestra seasons in years starts Sept. 29 when Sir Georg Solti takes the podium at Orchestra Hall for his ninth year as music director and the Orchestra's 87th season.

Fewer guest conductors and a lesser number of internationally-famous soloists means the 1977-78 spotlight will be on the orchestra itself. The Chicago Symphony has proven the hottest ticket in the world in recent years and the Orchestral Association and Solti have put together a program worthy of that reputation.

SOLTI WILL CONDUCT 11 weeks in Chicago plus two additional weeks on a pair of New York tours, one in late October and the second in early May.

The remainder of the programs are spread among five guest conductors along with Associate Conductor Henry Mazer and CSO chorus founder/director Margaret Hillis.

Carlo Maria Giulini conducts a total of six weeks, Daniel Barenboim and Erich Leinsdorf for three weeks apiece and Leonard Slatkin and Gennady Rozhdestvensky two weeks apiece.

By having the guests stay in residence for two or three weeks the Orchestral Association hopes to maintain the quality of music-making at the highest level. One-week stands by guest conductors hardly give the musicians time to adapt; three weeks of Barenboim or Leinsdorf promise excitement.

SOLTI'S FALL appearances in Chicago are scheduled for the opening three weeks of the season, after which Mazer takes over the week of Oct. 20-22 while Solti prepares for the season's individual musical highlight: three non-subscription performances of Gustav Mahler's Symphony No. 8 ("Symphony of a Thousand") on Oct. 27-29.

Solti, his eight soloists and Chicago Symphony Chorus take the Mahler to New York's Carnegie Hall for an already-sold out performance Oct. 31. The New York trip continues Nov. 1, 2 and 4. As with the Mahler, all are sold out.

Solti's weeks in Chicago in the fall offer a little for everybody: the opening-week series of concerts includes Shostakovich's First Symphony and the Strauss symphonic poems "Death and Transfiguration" and "Don Juan."

The Brucker Seventh/Tippett Fourth (later to be played in New York) will be given here Oct. 6-8 and the maestro's third week is a pops concert-type program with harmonica soloist Larry Adler. Included are works of Stravinsky, Gershwin, Chagrin and Berlioz.

MAZER'S ONE WEEK features CSO principal cellist Frank Miller, principal violist Milton Preves and pianist Peter Frankl in a program of Barber, Beethoven (the Third Piano Concerto) and Strauss (Don Quixote, featuring Miller).

Giulini's programs include Bruckner's Eighth Symphony, the Mozart Requiem (with the CSO Chorus) and an all-Beethoven program with Claudio Arrau featured soloist in the Emperor Piano Concerto (No. 5) along with the CSO playing the Seventh Symphony.

Barenboim conducts Bruckner's Fifth Symphony, the Berlioz Te Deum (with the CSO Chorus) and Bartok's First Piano Concerto with Jean-Bernard Pommier as soloist.

Some of the highlights of the January-through-June portion of the season include a pairing of the Schubert and Mahler Fifth Symphonies by Leinsdorf in January; the Tchaikovsky Second Piano Concerto (with Victoria Postnikova as soloist), coupled with the Manfred Symphony, conducted by Rozhdestvensky in February; and Isaac Stern as soloist in the Brahms first Violin Concerto under Giulini in March.

SOLTI'S SEVEN WEEKS in the spring include the Brahms "A German Requiem," which he and the CSO and chorus will also record; plus the Mahler First Symphony, Ralph Vaughan Williams Fourth Symphony, and Brahms Third and Fourth Symphonies, the latter which will also be recorded as part of a complete Brahms symphony cycle.

Not all subscription concerts are sold out. A limited number of single tickets for each concert go on sale at the box office, 221 South Michigan Ave., three weeks in advance of the concert. Mail orders are accepted only within 30 days of the concert date.

Persons interested in a particular concert should contact the Orchestra Hall box office (435-8111) in advance.

Members display their creations at Countryside

"Fireside" is a colorful oil portrait by Victoria Yau.

by SCOTT FOSDICK

Nature's blitzkrieg of fall colors won't happen this year. The leaves on the trees will not turn scarlet, yellow or brown.

The colors have all been stolen and stowed away in a little house at 407 N. Vail Ave. in Arlington Heights.

The thiefs are the members of the Countryside Art Gallery whose annual exhibit is now up, under the title, "Show and Tell." It is a members' show, and there was no attempt to group the pieces under any particular theme. A crisp, autumnal quality pervades the galiery nonetheless, and gives the impression that the artists were told to submit works to fit the season.

It's the colors that first strike you when you walk in the door. The walls are jammed with all manner of oils, acrylics and watercolors fairly bursting with earthy hues. This is not to imply that the subject matter is of the dull rustic-barn-against-the-sunset variety that you find hanging in the banks and dentists' offices of America. On the contrary. Though some of the art displayed here lacks polish, most of it abounds with creativity.

Four pieces of red, orange and blue plastic pipe — appropriately titled "A Bunch of Pipes" by artist Donna Read — slump against the wall like a drunk plumber. (You can lean them against your own wall for a mere $12.)

In the next room hangs a dramatic 6 by four-foot tapestry titled "Green on Red," silk screened by Rebecca Kraft.

Bettie Edwards is the creator of the most impressive piece in the show, "Lace." This is a dense crumple of cut paper, three feet in diameter, intricately scissored to a thick, yet delicate texture and spray painted with a blend of goldish browns, greens and occasional spots of deep red. The result is a rich abstraction that seems to catch the spirit of the entire show in its myriad of tiny curves.

"Show and Tell" ends Oct. 14. At that time, presumably, the gallery will release the colors to the custody of Mother Nature, and the trees will be allowed to do their thing. Until then, you can view the colors at Countryside from 1 to 5 p.m., Tuesdays through Sundays.

by DICK KLEINER

Last year it was "Jaws." This year it's "Star Wars." Next year, the people at MGM believe, it will be "Coma."

The film Michael Crichton wrote (from Robin Cook's novel) and is directing is currently being shot at the MGM studio. And it has one sensational scene which, alone, should be enough to drag thousands into the box office.

No one was allowed on the set when they shot this scene, but I saw some stills of it. And it is a heart-stopper. It's a scene of perhaps 20 or 25 people, hospitalized and in comas, who are just suspended from wires.

The picture concerns a hospital crime — somebody has a black market in vital organs going, and puts patients into comas and takes those organs. The critical scene has those victims in one huge ward simply dangling from wires.

They look to be floating in midair. They are nude (it was shot again with drapes for TV). They are connected to a device which feeds and monitors them automatically.

The claim is that this is, in reality, the treatment of the future for people in comas. Being suspended like that eliminates the danger of bed sores. It is considerably cheaper than individualized treatment. One doctor says that, in certain burn clinics, they even now suspend some badly burned patients.

Anyhow, this scene is one they hope the public will talk about and thereby hype the "Coma" box ofifce. They have a fine cast for "Coma," too — Genevieve Bujold is the star (the doctor who suspects the crime and investigates it), Michael Douglas, Elizabeth Ashley and Richard Widmark.

And Michael Crichton. He's the 6'10" author ("The Andromeda Strain" and "The Terminal Man," among others) who has become a director. "Westworld" was his first and this is his second.

Crichton is also an M.D., although he never practiced medicine. Still, that background helps on this picture with its hospital setting. I watched a scene in which Genevieve Bujold, at the bedside of patient Tom Selleck (he was the Salem cigarette man on billboards and was spotted there), has to take his pulse.

AUTHOR-DIRECTOR Michael Crichton is also an M.D. and his background has helped in putting together the thriller "Coma."

"No, this way," Crichton said, and showed Miss Bujold exactly how to hold Selleck's hand so as to obtain the proper pulse reading.

"I quit medicine," Crichton says, "because I found out I didn't like it. And, after the last few days on this set, shooting in an operating room set, it's all come back to me why I didn't like it."

Crichton thinks that "Coma" will be successful because it is a "scary" movie. And yet it has no scenes in which it sets out deliberately to shock and frighten you, unless you count that scene of the suspended coma victims. For one thing, Crichton has studiously avoided any closeups of surgical procedures. You'll see no scalpels slicing skin, no vital organs spilling out.

"I don't agree with those who show explicit scenes," he says. "And I don't think the public likes them, either.

"When I go to a movie and there comes a spot when I say to myself, 'Oh, God, they're really not going to show me that, are they?' and then they go ahead and show it to me, well, those films I don't like. And, from what I can see, that type of film turns out to be only marginally successful, at best."

But Crichton thinks "Coma" can and will be scary, without anything explicit up there on the screen. He believes, for one thing, that the theme of the film is scary to begin with. He thinks everybody is automatically frightened of hospitals. And he believes there is justification in their fright."

"Hospitals are scary," he says "and with very good reason. The idea has been popularized on TV and in slick magazines that you go into a hospital for a surgical procedure — the removal of a gall bladder, say — and they fix you up and you walk out and that's that.

"Well, sometimes it happens like that and sometimes it doesn't. Even the best surgeons admit that surgery is risky, at best. So I'd be very frightened if I had to go into the hospital."

Crichton says that when he went to medical school — he is a graduate of Harvard — "medicine was at its most scientific and inhuman." He thinks now that it has become a little less scientific and a little more human, with more attention paid to the patient and less to the readings on the meters.

Curiously, he started out as a youngster, wanting to write. But as a Harvard undergraduate, his English professors were always saying his writing was poor, so he thought he might not be able to make a living as a writer. Since pre-med was popular at Harvard, he switched to premed.

But, after he had gotten his M.D., he began writing again. And he has been very successful. Now, he has added directing to his talents.

"In some ways," he says, "I like directing better than acting. Writing is harder. I'm the kind of person who never stops when I'm doing what I'm doing. When I'm writing, I just keep on writing for hours, for days.

"But, with directing, you have to stop at the end of every day. So it's easier on me."

He says that he once toyed with the idea of becoming a psychiatrist — "and here I am." He laughs, because he says that being a director and having to deal with actors requires the skill and tact of a trained psychiatrist.

"In many ways," he says, "I am now closer to having a private practice than I have ever been."

He says he is the kind of person who delights in taking unnecessary chances. Professionally, he does that by writing books that are off the beaten track.

And, in his private life, he takes chances, too.

"I have my ways of expressing macho," he says. "Mostly, it's scuba diving. I go down too far and take ridiculous chances, stupid chances. I've gotten into serious trouble doing that, too.

"But, fortunately, I'm doing less of that as I grow older."

Movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing the area, plus capsule summaries and comments. Films reviewed are rated excellent, four stars; good, three stars; fair, two stars and poor, one star.

"The Bad News Bears in Breaking Training" — There may be a built in audience among those who rallied around the original "Bears" but this disappointing sequel has none of the sharply intelligent humor and pivotal performances of the original, substituting soppy sentimentality and sitcom one-liners instead. (PG).

"A Bridge Too Far" — A $25 million monument to the biggest Allied blunder of World War II, stunningly mounted and remarkably realistic. An all-star cast gives uneven performances. (PG)

"New York, New York" — An affectionate tribute to the archetypal Hollywood musical starring Robert De Niro as a wisecracking sax player and Liza Minelli as an aspiring band singer of the '40s and early '50s. The stars and music are excellent but the overall package is distinctly commercial. (PG).

"Star Wars" — Director George Lucas ("American Graffiti") pulled out all stops in mounting this space fantasy about intergalactic warfare, and the dazzling filmmaking, technical wizardry and rousing adventure make for one of the most spectacular entertainments of this or any other year. Not a heavy, heady "2001" trip, it aims to entertain, and the sky is the limit. (PG). ★★★★

"Smokey and the Bandit" — Burt Reynolds, along with trucker sidekick Jerry Reed, hauls 400 cases of bootleg beer across state lines and romances run-away bride-to-be Sally Field while lawman Jackie Gleason and his jilted son follow in hot pursuit. Slim storyline, but the raucous road action makes for great summer entertainment. (PG) ★★½

"Other Side of Midnight" — Sidney Sheldon's globe-hopping novel, a giant bestseller, about rags-to-riches characters and love lost and love regained at any cost, transferred to the screen as an opulently mounted tearjerker. (PG). ★★½

Mexican rodeo opens tonight

The charros (Mexican cowboys) will perform dangerous horsemanship feats in the all-new Mexican Festival and Rodeo opening tonight at the International Amphitheatre, Chicago.

Tony Aguilar stars in the weekend show, with performances scheduled tonight at 8, Saturday at 2:30 and 8:30, and Sunday, at 2:30 and 6:30.

Most of the riders have competed in Latin American rodeos where the rules are different from those in the States. The charro must stick with his mount until the judges signal him to dismount, rather than staying astride for a specified number of seconds.

Rodeo tickets are $4-$7, available at the Amphitheatre and all Ticketron outlets.

Medieval enamels at Art Institute

Medieval and Renaissance Limoges enamels are on view in the Michigan Avenue lobby of The Art Institute of Chicago through September.

The 10 pieces from the Department of Medieval and Renaissance Art, which have not been exhibited in recent years, illustrate the art of enameling in Limoges, France, from the 13th to the 16th centuries.

Objects on display are a book cover plaque depicting the Crucifixion, a reliquary casket used during the Middle Ages to house the remains of Christian saints, a pair of harness mounts, a triptych depicting scenes of the Passion, a Book of Hours painted by an enameler, a pair of enameled shells that formed a purse, a symbolic pax used in the Mass, a casket made of 13 enamel plaques depicting scenes from the lives of David and Solomon, a dessert plate and a tazza dish painted with an Old Testament scene.

'Coma' finds hospital a scary place

by DICK KLEINER

Last year it was "Jaws." This year it's "Star Wars." Next year, the people at MGM believe, it will be "Coma."

The film Michael Crichton wrote (from Robin Cook's novel) and is directing is currently being shot at the MGM studio. And it has one sensational scene which, alone, should be enough to drag thousands into the box office.

No one was allowed on the set when they shot this scene, but I saw some stills of it. And it is a heart-stopper. It's a scene of perhaps 20 or 25 people, hospitalized and in comas, who are just suspended from wires.

The picture concerns a hospital crime — somebody has a black market in vital organs going, and puts patients into comas and takes those organs. The critical scene has those victims in one huge ward simply dangling from wires.

They look to be floating in midair. They are nude (it was shot again with drapes for TV). They are connected to a device which feeds and monitors them automatically.

The claim is that this is, in reality, the treatment of the future for people in comas. Being suspended like that eliminates the danger of bed sores. It is considerably cheaper than individualized treatment. One doctor says that, in certain burn clinics, they even now suspend some badly burned patients.

Anyhow, this scene is one they hope the public will talk about and thereby hype the "Coma" box ofifce. They have a fine cast for "Coma," too — Genevieve Bujold is the star (the doctor who suspects the crime and investigates it), Michael Douglas, Elizabeth Ashley and Richard Widmark.

And Michael Crichton. He's the 6'10" author ("The Andromeda Strain" and "The Terminal Man," among others) who has become a director. "Westworld" was his first and this is his second.

Crichton is also an M.D., although he never practiced medicine. Still, that background helps on this picture with its hospital setting. I watched a scene in which Genevieve Bujold, at the bedside of patient Tom Selleck (he was the Salem cigarette man on billboards and was spotted there), has to take his pulse.

AUTHOR-DIRECTOR Michael Crichton is also an M.D. and his background has helped in putting together the thriller "Coma."

"No, this way," Crichton said, and showed Miss Bujold exactly how to hold Selleck's hand so as to obtain the proper pulse reading.

"I quit medicine," Crichton says, "because I found out I didn't like it. And, after the last few days on this set, shooting in an operating room set, it's all come back to me why I didn't like it."

Crichton thinks that "Coma" will be successful because it is a "scary" movie. And yet it has no scenes in which it sets out deliberately to shock and frighten you, unless you count that scene of the suspended coma victims. For one thing, Crichton has studiously avoided any closeups of surgical procedures. You'll see no scalpels slicing skin, no vital organs spilling out.

"I don't agree with those who show explicit scenes," he says. "And I don't think the public likes them, either.

"When I go to a movie and there comes a spot when I say to myself, 'Oh, God, they're really not going to show me that, are they?' and then they go ahead and show it to me, well, those films I don't like. And, from what I can see, that type of film turns out to be only marginally successful, at best."

But Crichton thinks "Coma" can and will be scary, without anything explicit up there on the screen. He believes, for one thing, that the theme of the film is scary to begin with. He thinks everybody is automatically frightened of hospitals. And he believes there is justification in their fright."

"Hospitals are scary," he says "and with very good reason. The idea has been popularized on TV and in slick magazines that you go into a hospital for a surgical procedure — the removal of a gall bladder, say — and they fix you up and you walk out and that's that.

"Well, sometimes it happens like that and sometimes it doesn't. Even the best surgeons admit that surgery is risky, at best. So I'd be very frightened if I had to go into the hospital."

Crichton says that when he went to medical school — he is a graduate of Harvard — "medicine was at its most scientific and inhuman." He thinks now that it has become a little less scientific and a little more human, with more attention paid to the patient and less to the readings on the meters.

Curiously, he started out as a youngster, wanting to write. But as a Harvard undergraduate, his English professors were always saying his writing was poor, so he thought he might not be able to make a living as a writer. Since pre-med was popular at Harvard, he switched to premed.

But, after he had gotten his M.D., he began writing again. And he has been very successful. Now, he has added directing to his talents.

"In some ways," he says, "I like directing better than acting. Writing is harder. I'm the kind of person who never stops when I'm doing what I'm doing. When I'm writing, I just keep on writing for hours, for days.

"But, with directing, you have to stop at the end of every day. So it's easier on me."

He says that he once toyed with the idea of becoming a psychiatrist — "and here I am." He laughs, because he says that being a director and having to deal with actors requires the skill and tact of a trained psychiatrist.

"In many ways," he says, "I am now closer to having a private practice than I have ever been."

He says he is the kind of person who delights in taking unnecessary chances. Professionally, he does that by writing books that are off the beaten track.

And, in his private life, he takes chances, too.

"I have my ways of expressing macho," he says. "Mostly, it's scuba diving. I go down too far and take ridiculous chances, stupid chances. I've gotten into serious trouble doing that, too.

"But, fortunately, I'm doing less of that as I grow older."

Movie guide

Designed to help readers decide which movies they want to see, this guide includes a listing of movies currently playing the area, plus capsule summaries and comments. Films reviewed are rated excellent, four stars; good, three stars; fair, two stars and poor, one star.

"The Bad News Bears in Breaking Training" — There may be a built in audience among those who rallied around the original "Bears" but this disappointing sequel has none of the sharply intelligent humor and pivotal performances of the original, substituting soppy sentimentality and sitcom one-liners instead. (PG).

"A Bridge Too Far" — A $25 million monument to the biggest Allied blunder of World War II, stunningly mounted and remarkably realistic. An all-star cast gives uneven performances. (PG)

"New York, New York" — An affectionate tribute to the archetypal Hollywood musical starring Robert De Niro as a wisecracking sax player and Liza Minelli as an aspiring band singer of the '40s and early '50s. The stars and music are excellent but the overall package is distinctly commercial. (PG).

"Star Wars" — Director George Lucas ("American Graffiti") pulled out all stops in mounting this space fantasy about intergalactic warfare, and the dazzling filmmaking, technical wizardry and rousing adventure make for one of the most spectacular entertainments of this or any other year. Not a heavy, heady "2001" trip, it aims to entertain, and the sky is the limit. (PG). ★★★★

"Smokey and the Bandit" — Burt Reynolds, along with trucker sidekick Jerry Reed, hauls 400 cases of bootleg beer across state lines and romances run-away bride-to-be Sally Field while lawman Jackie Gleason and his jilted son follow in hot pursuit. Slim storyline, but the raucous road action makes for great summer entertainment. (PG) ★★½

"Other Side of Midnight" — Sidney Sheldon's globe-hopping novel, a giant bestseller, about rags-to-riches characters and love lost and love regained at any cost, transferred to the screen as an opulently mounted tearjerker. (PG). ★★½

Medieval enamels at Art Institute

Medieval and Renaissance Limoges enamels are on view in the Michigan Avenue lobby of The Art Institute of Chicago through September.

The 10 pieces from the Department of Medieval and Renaissance Art, which have not been exhibited in recent years, illustrate the art of enameling in Limoges, France, from the 13th to the 16th centuries.

Objects on display are a book cover plaque depicting the Crucifixion, a reliquary casket used during the Middle Ages to house the remains of Christian saints, a pair of harness mounts, a triptych depicting scenes of the Passion, a Book of Hours painted by an enameler, a pair of enameled shells that formed a purse, a symbolic pax used in the Mass, a casket made of 13 enamel plaques depicting scenes from the lives of David and Solomon, a dessert plate and a tazza dish painted with an Old Testament scene.

Mexican rodeo opens tonight

The charros (Mexican cowboys) will perform dangerous horsemanship feats in the all-new Mexican Festival and Rodeo opening tonight at the International Amphitheatre, Chicago.

Tony Aguilar stars in the weekend show, with performances scheduled tonight at 8, Saturday at 2:30 and 8:30, and Sunday, at 2:30 and 6:30.

Most of the riders have competed in Latin American rodeos where the rules are different from those in the States. The charro must stick with his mount until the judges signal him to dismount, rather than staying astride for a specified number of seconds.

Rodeo tickets are $4-$7, available at the Amphitheatre and all Ticketron outlets.

Camelot set in Egypt

'Nefertiti' lacks movement, feeling

by LYNN ASINOF

Take "Camelot" out of old England and set it in ancient Egypt and you'll end up with the basic plot of "Nefertiti," the soon-to-be Broadway musical that opened a trial six-week run at the Blackstone Theatre Tuesday.

Both shows start with a love triangle and end with the destruction of an empire. In between there is a lot of idealism punctuated by singing and dancing.

But the idea that worked so well in "Camelot," falls flat in "Nefertiti." The Egyptian version, for all its singing and dancing, lacks movement and color. Most of all it lacks feeling. The main problem is a bloodless script that takes people and turns them into symbols.

It isn't that the actors don't try. Andrea Marcovicci did a remarkable job as Nefertiti, managing to eke real feeling from the shallow script.

Best known for her role opposite Woody Allen in "The Front," Miss Marcovicci has a buoyancy and sensitivity that make her a pleasure to watch. Her happiness was contagious when she opened the second act in a song and dance routine with her husband Pharaoh Akhnaton, played by Robert LuPone.

By comparison, LuPone came off like milktoast. Faced with an idealistic and simplistic character, LuPone attacked the role with stiffling sincerity.

Granted, there was little in the script for LuPone to sink his teeth in. Akhnaton, never hungered, desired, coveted or even burped. LuPone did what he could with a sterile role.

Michael Nouri as Hap, the third side of the triangle, had more substance in his role as soldier and lover.

Review

And he knew what to do with it. A forceful actor, Nouri has a light touch with humor, and made the most of his odd-man-out situation.

The play works best in the small numbers when there are only a few people on stage. That's a good indication that there is something wrong with the staging of the big numbers. It also means that there may be something worth salvaging in the show.

One particularly good scene comes when Nefertiti meets Akhnaton for the first time and gets caught up in his dream. Trying to disentangle herself, she becomes tongue-tied and sings a delightful tune called "Pardon Me a Minute."

Most of the big numbers lack cohesion. The dancers looked uncomfortable with the stylized modern choreography, which never actually captures an Egyptian feeling. And the stage often looked cluttered, despite the purposely sparse scenery.

The best number "Someone Was Here," showed that the show can work if properly reworked. Starting with emotional goodbye to Hap, Nefertiti gradually turns a soulful solo into a fullblown statement of her ideas about people. The usually faceless company came to life and things started clicking, if only for a brief time.

The show has potential, but opening night showed it needs a lot of reworking. The creators of "Nefertiti" have only six weeks to decide how to breathe life into their creation before it leaves Chicago.

SET IN ancient Egypt, the musical show "Nefertiti" has a strong cast, including Andrea Marcovicci as Nefertiti and Robert LuPone as her husband Pharaoh Akhnaton, both shown above.

when asked why he turned away from performing. "I've been dancing since I was five years old. I did my last performance in Moscow and I said 'Goodbye audience. I've had it.' "

Lewis still dances occasionally with his company but limits himself to three or four performances a month. He prefers to spend his time creating dances.

"I THINK I'M A weird case," Lewis said, noting most dancers dread the day they have to give up performing. "I love performing, but it has never really been enough. Ever since I was a kid I have always had another project going. Performing is great but it only lasts 1½ hours."

Lewis says he doesn't like the process of choreography. "That's a pain in the neck," he said. Rather he likes the feeling of seeing his ideas expressed.

"When I go out in the audience and watch it and it says exactly what I want it to say — that's a feeling that lasts," he said.

And just in case the feeling fades a bit, Lewis keeps a videotape library of his works. "When I do get down in the dumps, I pull it out and say I did do something," he said.

THAT, IN FACT, is one reason why Lewis says he has his own company — "so I can see what I have done."

Lewis started dancing at the age of five because of a slight deformity in his foot. After an operation, the doctor told Lewis "a little tap danging will straighten it all out."

It wasn't easy to be a boy studying dance in Brooklyn, Lewis said. The kids called him "twinkle toes" and his father, a lathe operator, didn't tell the guys at the shop that his son went to dancing school.

"I got my bruises and scars defending my right to be a twinkle toes," said Lewis noting that male dancers are more accepted today.

Lewis has no doubts that "Nefertiti" is going to be a smash. He says it is a quality production and the quality shows.

"Dance is dance and theatre is theatre and the combination of the two is the ultimate."

Best known for her role opposite Woody Allen in "The Front," Miss Marcovicci has a buoyancy and sensitivity that make her a pleasure to watch. Her happiness was contagious when she opened the second act in a song and dance routine with her husband Pharaoh Akhnaton, played by Robert LuPone.

By comparison, LuPone came off like milktoast. Faced with an idealistic and simplistic character, LuPone attacked the role with stiffling sincerity.

Granted, there was little in the script for LuPone to sink his teeth in. Akhnaton, never hungered, desired, coveted or even burped. LuPone did what he could with a sterile role.

Michael Nouri as Hap, the third side of the triangle, had more substance in his role as soldier and lover.

Review

And he knew what to do with it. A forceful actor, Nouri has a light touch with humor, and made the most of his odd-man-out situation.

The play works best in the small numbers when there are only a few people on stage. That's a good indication that there is something wrong with the staging of the big numbers. It also means that there may be something worth salvaging in the show.

One particularly good scene comes when Nefertiti meets Akhnaton for the first time and gets caught up in his dream. Trying to disentangle herself, she becomes tongue-tied and sings a delightful tune called "Pardon Me a Minute."

Most of the big numbers lack cohesion. The dancers looked uncomfortable with the stylized modern choreography, which never actually captures an Egyptian feeling. And the stage often looked cluttered, despite the purposely sparse scenery.

The best number "Someone Was Here," showed that the show can work if properly reworked. Starting with emotional goodbye to Hap, Nefertiti gradually turns a soulful solo into a fullblown statement of her ideas about people. The usually faceless company came to life and things started clicking, if only for a brief time.

The show has potential, but opening night showed it needs a lot of reworking. The creators of "Nefertiti" have only six weeks to decide how to breathe life into their creation before it leaves Chicago.

SET IN ancient Egypt, the musical show "Nefertiti" has a strong cast, including Andrea Marcovicci as Nefertiti and Robert LuPone as her husband Pharaoh Akhnaton, both shown above.

when asked why he turned away from performing. "I've been dancing since I was five years old. I did my last performance in Moscow and I said 'Goodbye audience. I've had it.' "

Lewis still dances occasionally with his company but limits himself to three or four performances a month. He prefers to spend his time creating dances.

"I THINK I'M A weird case," Lewis said, noting most dancers dread the day they have to give up performing. "I love performing, but it has never really been enough. Ever since I was a kid I have always had another project going. Performing is great but it only lasts 1½ hours."

Lewis says he doesn't like the process of choreography. "That's a pain in the neck," he said. Rather he likes the feeling of seeing his ideas expressed.

"When I go out in the audience and watch it and it says exactly what I want it to say — that's a feeling that lasts," he said.

And just in case the feeling fades a bit, Lewis keeps a videotape library of his works. "When I do get down in the dumps, I pull it out and say I did do something," he said.

THAT, IN FACT, is one reason why Lewis says he has his own company — "so I can see what I have done."

Lewis started dancing at the age of five because of a slight deformity in his foot. After an operation, the doctor told Lewis "a little tap danging will straighten it all out."

It wasn't easy to be a boy studying dance in Brooklyn, Lewis said. The kids called him "twinkle toes" and his father, a lathe operator, didn't tell the guys at the shop that his son went to dancing school.

"I got my bruises and scars defending my right to be a twinkle toes," said Lewis noting that male dancers are more accepted today.

Lewis has no doubts that "Nefertiti" is going to be a smash. He says it is a quality production and the quality shows.

The Chicago Symphony's 'Top 12'

Bill Gowen
DISCovering classics

If the Chicago Symphony is currently enjoying unparalled success in concert halls around the world that success has carried into the recording studio as well.

Music Director Sir Georg Solti has recorded one best-seller after another but he isn't alone: we are in an era when a CSO record seems successful no matter who is on the podium.

IN RECENT YEARS James Levine, Carlo Maria Giulini, Daniel Barenboim and Claudio Abbado have recorded here and the results have been spectacular in nearly every instance.

Add the current era to the legacy left by Fritz Reiner, Rafel Kubelik, Fredrick Stock and Jean Martinon and the Chicago Symphony can be proud of its 60-year recorded history.

A personal "top 12" list of Chicago Symphony recordings, listed alphabetically by composer:

BARTOK: Music for Strings, Percussion and Celesta; Hungarian Sketches, conducted by Fritz Reiner. RCA Victrola VICS-1620. This is Reiner at his best with the 1936 "Music for Strings, etc." given its most energetic performance on records.

BEETHOVEN: Nine Symphonies, conducted by Sir Georg Solti. London CSP-(nine discs). Solti's most ambitious recording achievement in Chicago, this is also the first Beethoven symphony cycle in the orchestra's history. Recorded in three different halls, the sound is remarkably uniform throughout. The interpretations are in the rich, middle-European tradition.

BEETHOVEN: Five Piano Concerti, Vladimir Ashkenazy, soloist, conducted by Sir Georg Solti, London 2404 (four discs). A true collaboration, probably the best Beethoven Concerto cycle in a crowded field, which includes the immortal Fleisher/Szell Cleveland Orchestra set. One of Solti's earliest Chicago efforts and one of his best.

NIELSEN: Symphony No. 4, conducted by Jean Martinon. RCA has unfortunately extinguished the "Inextinguishable" symphony from its catalog, hopefully temporarily. This was one of the last RCA recordings made in Orchestra Hall after the 1966 renovation, the company since moving to Medinah Temple. The dry acoustics are suitable here, however, particularly in the Donald Koss vs. Gordon Peters "Timpani battle" in the finale.

PROKOFIEV: "Alexander Nevsky," conducted by Fritz Reiner, RCA Gold Seal AGL-1, 1966. This is the first record made by the Chicago Symphony Chorus. Its only drawback is a stodgy English translation instead of the original Russian.

MAHLER: Symphony No. 3, conducted by James Levine, RCA ARL-2 1757 (two discs). With time this may rank as one of the top two or three CSO recordings ever made. A perfect marriage of conductor, orchestra, vocal and instrumental soloists, women's chorus plus perfect use of the Medinah Temple acoustics.

MAHLER: Symphony No. 8, conducted by Sir Georg Solti, London CS 1295 (two discs). More awards have come to this recording than any other in the CSO's history. Recorded in Vienna on the orchestra's first European tour in 1971, it remains a blockbuster musically and decibelwise. The only regret is the use of Vienna choruses instead of the Chicago Symphony Chorus.

MAHLER: Symphony No. 9, conducted by Carlo Maria Giulini, Deutsche Grammophon 2707 097 (two discs). The greatness of the CSO as a Mahler orchestra is evidenced by this third recording on the list, each under a different conductor. The recently-released Symphony No. 2 under Abbado could also be included. It's that good.

SMETANA: Ma Vlast (My Fatherland), conducted by Rafael Kubelik, Mercury SRI-2 77006 (two discs). One of the few Kubelik-Chicago discs left in the catalog, this remastering (by Philips) offers a perfect example of the high fidelity sound pioneered by Mercury at Orchestra Hall in the 1950-51 era. Using a single microphone, the engineers made recordings in Chicago that were sonic spectaculars for their day. Musically this Smetana cycle of symphonic poems is perfect, too, even better than two more recent versions by the same conductor.

STRAUSS: "Also Sprach Zarathustra," conducted by Fritz Reiner, RCA Victrola VICS 1265. Regarded as the best record Reiner ever made in Chicago it was, ironically, his first. Reiner later re-recorded this work but he was in failing health at the time. Though in better sound, it lacks the drive of this earlier version.

STRAVINSKY: "Song of the Nightingale," coupled with Prokofiev's "Lt. Kije Suite," conducted by Fritz Reiner, RCA Red Seal LSC 2150. Reiner at his best in a rarely-recorded work (the Stravinsky). This record's strength is the solo playing by many of the orchestra's section leaders.

STRAVINSKY: "La Sacre du Printemps" (The Rite of Spring), conducted by Sir Georg Solti, London CS-6885. Slap this one on your stereo and turn the volume if you want to rattle the windows or wake the neighbors. Never has the CSO been more exciting to the ear; a Solti masterpiece of drive and musical insight.

To come: Soon to be released as a Solti version of the Verdi Requiem on RCA, his first Chicago recording for that company. Also a set of the four Schumann symphonies on Deutsche Grammophon under Daniel Barenboim and a Beethoven "Missa Solemnis" under Solti on London. The Verdi and Beethoven feature the Chicago Symphony Chorus.

Bill o' fare

If a drive in the country and a hearty meal served by friendly people in tasteful surroundings appeal to you, come to Floyd's in Carpentersville.

Located on Rte. 31 just past Elgin on the Northwest Tollway, Floyd's stands where the land still remembers how to roll. Dinner here would be the perfect ending to an autumn drive through the beautiful Fox River Valley.

Floyd's specializing in steak and seafood, is the kind of restaurant visitors to Hawaii pine for at home: a formal dining room that does not require you to bind yourself up in a jacket and tie. Warmly decorated in reds and woods, the interior glows softly in candlelight while friendly middle-aged waitresses do their best to slow down life's hectic pace with pleasant unhurried service that lets you digest Floyd's herculean offering between courses.

Featuring:
Floyd's

ALL OF THAT, of course, has made Floyd's an institution on the fringes of the Northwest suburban area. Although Floyd Falese died in 1970 his brother Tom with whom he opened the restaurant in 1943 is still president of the company. Head chef Harley Carlson has also been with the company since its beginning.

As for the menu, don't expect to see just a little ol' steak lying on your plate if you order a la carte. A la carte at Floyd's means you still receive a tossed salad, rolls and butter and a choice of four kinds of potato or vegetable.

It costs $1 more to order a complete dinner, which adds soup or juice and a relish tray to the above.

The relish tray arrives at the table heaped with black olives, celery and carrot sticks, hot peppers, onions, pate and cheese spread. A soup billed merely as chicken noodle turned out to also contain carrots and beans.

The salad was the only disappointment. It was plain head lettuce whose pale green to white monotony was unrelieved by darker leaves. Either the creamy garlic dressing was watery or the lettuce was not well-dried.

THE MAIN COURSES were excellent, highlighted by Canadian barbequed baby back ribs heavy with perfectly cooked smoky-flavored meat, ($6.95). A tangy sauce is served on the side, but there's no need to cover up the natural taste of these ribs.

The 16 oz. Floyd's special club steak ($8.75) was a touch overbroiled on the outside but done to a perfect medium rare on the inside.

Most dinners are priced from $7 to $9. Others include broiled English Dover sole, Alaskan king crab legs, glazed Long Island duckling with orange sauce and numerous cuts of beef. Floyd's also has changing daily specials as well as low-priced specials such as all-you-can-eat filet of sole on Fridays for $3.50.

While we had to take some ribs home and were far too full for dessert, we were challenged by Floyd's touting of its cheesecake as "world best." For 75 cents it was a healthy slice and very good — but what cheesecake can live up to perfection?

Floyd's is open seven days a week with lunch beginning daily at 11 a.m. Dinner is served Monday through Thursday until 11 p.m., Friday until midnight, Saturday until 1 a.m. and Sunday until 10 p.m. Banquet rooms for up to 300 guests also are available.

Death's inevitable visit is easier for the prepared

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

Elizabeth Kubler-Ross, mock funerals and high school seminars notwithstanding, many Americans still treat death as an "off limits" subject.

If facing the emotional reality of a loved one's death is painful, so is coping with the many practical concerns — from intricacies of estate planning to size of the grave marker.

But like it or not, decisions have to be made. And according to the panelists at "Facing the Inevitable," a seminar conducted Tuesday evening at Elgin Community College, planning for a death can save money, time and trouble for everyone involved.

"Most people don't understand death in the first place, and they are simply unprepared for it," said Willis Reed, minister at Elgin's First Baptist Church. "It's a great tragedy. I deal with so many problems after it's too late — and they could have been avoided by consulting specialists in advance."

ONLY ABOUT 10 per cent of Reed's funerals are preplanned, he said, and most of them are by church members. Many people ask his advice on funeral homes and the service itself — a fact he attributes to the high transiency rate that leaves many families without any guides for a choice of funeral director.

It is just that lack of knowledge that can haunt a family later, said Thomas Ryan, director of the Fox Valley Funeral Assn., a non-profit organization promoting simple, economical funerals.

"When a death occurs, there are so many questions to be answered . . . do you want pallbearers, an open or closed casket, clergyman, cremation or burial? Will there be songs? If so, which ones? Half our people aren't church members and aren't close to a minister, and the funeral director has a financial interest in the arrangements."

"The decision maker is usually in poor shape himself," Ryan added. "Our suggestion is to sit down at the kitchen table and make plans in advance — without jokes. By getting it in writing, you avoid a lot of problems later."

FUNERAL COSTS vary widely, Ryan said: anywhere from a $70 cremation with the body in a cardboard box to an elaborate $3,000 or $4,000 service. By touring several funeral homes and comparing their offerings, you'll be spared a confusing "I can't think about that now, you do what's best," alternative.

Preplanning can also avoid headaches on the legal front, said Elgin attorney Ken Steffen. While most elderly and married couples with children recognize the importance of making a will, even young singles can benefit from the security it provides. "The old wives' tale that if you don't have a will, the state gets everything just isn't true, but the last thing you want to see is a group of relatives arguing over the money," he said.

The presence of a will can ensure comprehensive estate planning, he said and allows the executor to distribute the deceased's property without court permission every step along the way, thus eliminating additional legal expenses.

In addition, Steffen said, wills allow charitable giving — to churches, schools and the like — something many older, affluent people never consider.

WHILE A LAWYER'S consultation is not always essential, Steffen warned against the simplified "I love you" wills that turn over a spouse's property to the other spouse or to their children.

"It can be done, if you're very careful about it. But it's not always safe, and I don't recommend it," he said. "From a lawyer's standpoint, wills aren't moneymakers. A lawyer's will is just more likely to hold up than the ones you buy in a stationery store."

So you've consulted an attorney and are up to date on state inheritance taxes and federal estate taxes; you and your family have prepared wills and decided on the type of funeral service, headstone, and burial vault you prefer. Does advance planning help ease the grief when death does occur?

"No amount of training or knowledge can overcome the pain," said Don Laird of the Stout Funeral Home in Elgin. "Even after 23 years in the business, I'll be a basket case when my own mother or father dies. But death is a part of life, and the less mysterious it is, the better off we are."

The doctor says

Gallstones can be dissolved by drugs

What causes gallstones? Could injury, a severe blow or damage to the liver cause gallstones? Is there any way other than surgery to eliminate the stones?

No, injury does not cause gallstones. There are two main types of gallstones: those formed from cholesterol and those formed from bile pigment.

The cholesterol is the same wax-like substance that is deposited with fatty material in arteries to form atherosclerosis which leads to heart attacks, strokes and other circulatory problems. The cholesterol manufactured by the liver, or that in your food, is all drained out of the liver in the bile. If there are enough bile salts and lecithin present in the bile they keep it soluble and help to prevent cholesterol stones. These stones may be dissolved by newer medicines and that is part of a national study.

The bile pigment stones come from the pigments in your red blood cells that are broken down. The pigment is processed by the liver. This is why a person with an increased destruction of red blood cells may be susceptible to these gallstones.

Inflammation of the gall bladder may also be a factor in some cases.

I want to get a female sterilization through the navel. My husband doesn't approve of it. He says it makes a woman cold afterward. We are using the withdrawal method right now and his sex life in vanishing. I blame it on that.

Will there be any change in a woman? I'm 41 and my husband is 48. I am a Canadian and where I live we have to get the husband's consent to have such an operation. I'm too ashamed to discuss my sex life with my doctor.

There is nothing to be ashamed of. If it were not for sex there wouldn't be anyone here to talk about it.

Tying the tubes in a woman, by any means, blocks the tubes so the ovum cannot pass down into the tube and be fertilized. If the ovaries are not injured they will continue to function as before and so will the uterus. That means a continuation of menstruation and all other aspects of normal female functions with the sole exception that a successful operation means a woman cannot get pregnant. A very small number of operations are not successful because the tube may reform making a new passage way for the ovum. Such an operation should not affect your sex life in any way other than preventing pregnancies.

I can't say whether your present method of birth control, the withdrawal technique, is affecting your husband or not, but certainly fear of pregnancy by either the man or the woman can put a dampening effect on the whole affair. I might add that the withdrawal technique is one of the least reliable methods of birth control.

Why don't you talk it over with your husband and perhaps he would agree to both of you discussing the right method of birth control for you with your family doctor.

Cook confused over metric conversions

Dear Roberta: Don't feel bad about not understanding the metric system. My children are being taught it in school. They've brought home some of their instructional materials. One is a cookbook with all metric measurements that they use to learn dry and liquid metric capacities. I might as well be reading a foreign language cookbook! They all know their heights, weights and the distance to Grandpa's house in metric measurements. I don't, and I'm the one who does the shopping, bakes the cakes and does the driving. Perhaps you could do us all a great service, if you could find out how we grownups can learn about metrics. Surely there's a helpful booklet or some such for us all. Can you find one to recommend?—Dee Axtell

Your letter is a pleasure, and thanks. And your idea is good. I'm now trying to find materials about metrication for adults. To be continued, as soon as I locate good instructions.

Dear Roberta: Did you ever notice that kids at birthday parties usually leave behind most of the cake on their plates, but eat up cupcakes without leaving a scrap?—Virginia Fisher

Yes, and it's especially true when it comes to very small children. Though I hate waste, I remain a sentimentalist when it comes to the traditional birthday cake, all decorated and spelling out "Happy Birthday, Suzy!" across the top. Perhaps I should reconsider. After all, the idea is for the children to enjoy themselves. It's their party (and just a little bit for me!).

That's show biz...anchor's style counts

Nothing is sacred on television anymore. Even the nightly newscast has succumbed to the mass merchandising instincts of the industry.

There was a time when viewers could barely distinguish the various network news shows and anchors, who were obvious straight-laced descendants of the print media. They were serious newsmen and sometimes network emissaries, and nothing more.

But, today, news anchors are celebrities. They command high salaries, have sly and slick agents who look out for their interests, and enjoy their star-like promotion in full-page magazine and newspaper ads that resemble the marketing of beer and aspirin.

NEWS ANCHORS no longer just inform their audience. They are personalities who can draw large numbers of viewers and, with the help of just the right set and format, can spark high ratings. The higher the ratings, the more the station can charge sponsors for air time and the greater the profits.

It is that simple, underlying philosophy of the television business that has prompted the development of show business news.

The fact that personalities are just as important as content was evident in ABC's hiring of Barbara Walters for an unprecedented $1 million a year to co-anchor the network's evening news and do interview specials. For that reason, it is ironic that network news boss, Roone Arledge, has decided to de-emphasize the anchor role to help pick up the pace of his third place news show.

Although the "de-anchoring" of news came to be a developing trend on the network level, celebrity news and the cosmetic changes made to provide just the proper setting are alive and well on the local level — especially in Chicago.

IN ANOTHER week or so, WLS-TV will premiere a slightly revamped version of its 5, 6 and 10 p.m. newscasts. A newly designed, contemporary and simple set will be dominated by a large supergraphic screen that will allow the anchors to converse directly with reporters giving live minicam reports during the newscast.

The monitor will be used "like a picture telephone of the future," said station manager Phil Boyer. "It will enable us to better utilize a greater number of minicam reports and is designed to give the viewer a greater sense of immediacy."

Viewers will be able to see the anchormen's feet under the new "free form" desk, he said, "which won't be anything like the wall of China anchordesk we're using now that separates the news personalities from the audience."

"THE SET IS not complicated or gaudy because it is supposed to highlight our personalities. We don't want to diminish them with too large a screen," Boyer said.

Channel 7, which has long thrived as ratings king in Chicago because of its "happy to be in your home with the news" team image, plans to dress its "Eyewitness" staff in new outfits this fall.

There will be even more subtle alterations in the news show format. A new segment called "Night People," will be presented Tuesday through Friday on the 10 p.m. news by reporter John Culea. It will focus on nightly headliners and happenings.

However, Boyer admits the changes mostly amount to a "repackaging of the product," with no real change in the news shop's content or philosophy.

WLS HAS BEEN immortalizing its biggest and brightest news stars — anchors like Fahey Flynn, Joel Daly, John Drury and Terry Murphy and reporters like Jay Levine and Bob Petty — in a multimedia news promotion that declares, "If it's important to Chicago, it's on Eyewitness News."

It is a promotional campaign indicative of a news operation that regards its news anchors and reporters as celebrities who attract viewers and reap ratings.

As much as the competition hates to admit it, Channel 7 is not alone in its format or promotions.

Nearly two years ago, WMAQ-TV station manager Lee Hanna and news director Sheldon Hoffman came to Chicago from New York with plans for establishing a NewsCenter 5 operation that generally consisted of a sprawling, contemporary free form set and a magazine styled news format in a unique 1½ hour package.

THE STATION HAS looked to the early news show's format to improve its third place stature, rather than its anchor personalities. Although ratings have been slowly and steadily improving, management has given in to the importance Chicago area viewers seem to place on news personalities.

WMAQ, beginning Oct. 3, will team its 4:30 p.m. anchors Ron Hunter and Don Craig on the 10 p.m. news where Hunter alone has carried the news for more than a year.

The change is being made, Hoffman admits, because Chicago is a "double anchor town," although he insists that promotions and focus continue to center on the show's news content instead of its personalities.

Channel 2 has likewise addressed itself to the idea that anchormen and reporters sell the news. WBBM-TV recently hired Mort Crim to co-anchor the station's 6 p.m. newscast with the already popular and credible Bill Kurtis. The change resulted in Kurtis co-anchoring the 10 p.m. news with his longtime partner and on-camera maverick Walter Jacobson.

If Channel 2 did not believe personalities were important, they would not have bothered with a third anchor, nor would they have reinstated veteran weatherman John Coughlin earlier this year in the very midst of a spring advertising campaign (that still lingers today) claiming that its 10 p.m. news cast is "the 10 o'clock news."

The celebrity status enjoyed by network news heavies like Barbara Walters and Walter Cronkite has become a new pleasure for local television newsmen whether they are willing to admit it or not.

Local stations are obviously opting for style and show. That is not to say they have no concern for hard news material. But, there are more special series, special reports and features on the evening news, dealing with everything from the Panama Canal to a Wisconsin puppy farm that are being given preferred treatment and more time than the news.

In this grappling for new sets and bigger "stars," the local news shops should keep in mind their main responsibility is to keep the public informed of the day's events and add to that meaningful perspective.

Somewhere in the race to create media news stars, the basics of good journalism has too often been lacking.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

- The new Marie debuts on the season premiere of "Donny and Marie" at 7 p.m. on Channel 7 with guest stars Kris Kristofferson and the "Star Wars" cast.
- Peter Sellers is a laugh and a half as the intrepid Inspector Clouseau in the movie, "The Return of the Pink Panther" at 8 p.m. on Channel 7.

Child-woman Kim Darby has come of age at 30

by VERNON SCOTT

Kim Darby sat in the noonday sunshine outside Stage 5 at Paramount Studios, her face pink from unaccustomed exposure to the sun.

She looked frail and waif-like in the canvas chair, nibbling slices of cucumber and gazing off into the sky.

Kim is costarring with Henry Winkler in "The One, The Only," her first feature movie in several years.

MUCH WAS EXPECTED of Kim 10 years ago when she made her film debut playing a 14-year-old in "True Grit." John Wayne won an Oscar for his portrayal of Rooster Cogburn in the film.

Although she was 20 at the time, Kim was more naive than Mattie Ross, the child-woman she played. During production of the movie Kim was the wife of actor James Stacy, who was later to suffer a tragic motorcycle accident which cost him an arm and leg.

Kim won glowing reviews. Producers were quick to cast her in several undistinguished pictures, among them "Generation," "The Strawberry Statement'' and "The Grissom Gang."

Whether the roles were inferior, the scripts banal or the pictures simply poorly made, Kim Darby was no box office star — which is not to say she wasn't an excellent actress.

FOR WHATEVER reasons, her career suffered, as did her private life.

She divorced Stacy in 1969, testifying the actor "didn't love me any more." She was given custody of their daughter, Heather, who was 11 months old.

Now, sitting in the sun, Kim no longer could pass for 14. Or even 20. She was thin and there were crows-feet at the corners of her eyes. Her face reflected a new wisdom and the fine etchings of pain.

Asked why she had dropped from sight in the past year or so, Kim said. "I'll be 30 soon and I guess I just needed a rest.

"I'VE BEEN AT IT since I was 14, taking dancing and acting lessons. My first job was a role in 'Mr. Novak' when I was just 16.

"After I did 'Rich Man, Poor Man' two years ago I decided to stay away for a full year. I needed to step away and do some growing up and to look at myself and what I wanted from life.

"It can be a painful decision — wanting to be different. Any kind of change means giving up familiar ways and thoughts. It's not easy to examine yourself closely. But I've had help from a psychologist.

"During the year I did some traveling with Heather. She's 9 now.

"A lot happened to me by the time I was 21. I was married, a movie star, divorced and had a child. That's an awful lot to deal with all at once."

IN APPLYING the brakes to her life Kim has concentrated on being the best mother she knows how. Her friends are mostly women who, like herself, are divorced. She seldom has a date.

KIM DARBY, who made her film debut 10 years ago, is making her first movie in several years, co-starring in "The One, The Only."

"I'm not loooking for a relationship right now," Kim said. "If I were looking for an important person in my life I would be very selective. He'd have to be kind and wonderful and secure within himself."

There hasn't even been a rumor about a romance between Kim and costar Winkler.

"Henry is a fine young man and a wonderful actor," she said in a maternal voice, although she is younger than The Fonz. "There is a special intelligence that stands behind his work. He is totally unselfish on camera.

"I PLAY HIS girlfriend, and later his wife, in the picture. And for the first time, I don't have to play a victim. I get kissed a lot which makes me happy. In all my other work I've always been victimized by someone.

"I don't want to play that kind of role again. The trouble is, when you play a victim or a frightened, put-upon woman as often as I have you begin to think of yourself in that light as a human being. It's sort of a transferral of character.

"I've worked hard on myself, knowing I'm the only one responsible for my life. It's kind of scary to be an actress, to be single and to raise a child alone.

"There was a time when I thought nothing would be better in my life. I was despairing. I've taken my life in my own hands and I'm facing reality for the first time — facing the pain of growing up and living."

Kim had finished eating her cucumber and it was time to return to work.

"I PLAY HIS girlfriend, and later his wife, in the picture. And for the first time, I don't have to play a victim. I get kissed a lot which makes me happy. In all my other work I've always been victimized by someone.

"I don't want to play that kind of role again. The trouble is, when you play a victim or a frightened, put-upon woman as often as I have you begin to think of yourself in that light as a human being. It's sort of a transferral of character.

"I've worked hard on myself, knowing I'm the only one responsible for my life. It's kind of scary to be an actress, to be single and to raise a child alone.

"There was a time when I thought nothing would be better in my life. I was despairing. I've taken my life in my own hands and I'm facing reality for the first time — facing the pain of growing up and living."

Kim had finished eating her cucumber and it was time to return to work.

Preps may wonder what is going on

by DON FRISKE

Stranger things have certainly happened in the month of September, but who can remember the last time Wheeling entered its third football contest without a loss while Hersey searched for its first victory?

That's the way the schedule shapes up this weekend in Mid-Suburban League football.

By defeating Schaumburg 6-3 last week, the Wildcats own a 2-0 record. At the same time, Forest View handled the Huskies 14-8 after St. Viator ruined their opener by winning 21-6. To make things worse for the defending champs in the North Division, both games were played on their field, and now they must take to the road.

PROBABLY THEIR most crucial test so far will come Saturday afternoon when the Huskies travel to Barrington to play the undefeated Broncos. Hersey coach Joe Gliwa knows how much is at stake, especially now that the games count in determining post-season action. Both teams are in the North.

"We don't like going over there to play and we don't like playing a day game when we like to play at night, but that's the way it goes," Gliwa said. "Barrington looks like a polished club right now. At least I didn't see them make any mistakes. We're impressed with them from a coaches' standpoint, but we're not overwhelmed."

Barrington, new to the MSL this year, passed its initiation into the conference by beating Elk Grove 7-0 last Saturday.

"We just hope there's no letdown after Elk Grove," said Bill Graham, the Bronco coach. "Our players know that the Elk Grove game didn't count and that the Hersey game does, but there might be a letdown anyway."

High school football

AT FREMD, the Vikings will host Wheeling tonight with both teams trying to keep their undefeated records intact. So far this year, the two teams have allowed only three points while scoring 73.

Viking coach Joe Samojedny is curious to see if his unscored-upon defense is really as consistent as it seems to be.

"We had some things to sew up before the first game, and so the shutout against Holy Cross was a surprise," he said. "Against Hoffman Estates, we were playing a team that was opening its season. Now we'd like to know if we really have that consistency."

The surprising Wildcats, who have gained 407 total yards while allowing only 183 in two games, should provide a good test for the Fremd defense.

AT CONANT, the Grenadiers of Elk Grove will try to begin their divisional play tonight on the upswing by challenging the Cougars, who have not lost a game. Conant made it 2-0 last Friday night by defeating Arlington, 15-8.

"We've got to start playing better," said Don Schnake, the Elk Grove coach. "I think Conant has, without a doubt, the best football team they've ever had there. They're physical in the line and they're very skilled. Their defense is very physical."

Schnake hopes to have the services of quarterback Ralph Souder and running back Jack Walsh. Both missed the Barrington game with injuries.

AT FOREST VIEW, the Falcons will host Hoffman Estates tonight, a team they have never beaten. The Hawks have won 31-28 and 6-0 in previous contests between the South Division teams.

"We're taking into account what has happened before in preparing for this game," said Fred Lussow, the Falcon coach. "Early, I said we could run and pass. We proved it against Hersey. We've made some decisions on offense as far as personnel, and our execution improved. Things clicked."

AT ROLLING MEADOWS, the Mustangs will play Arlington tonight in the only cross-over game of the weekend. The Cards will be going after their first win while the Mustangs will be hoping to improve on their 1-1 mark in their home opener.

AT SCHAUMBURG, the Saxons will be going for their first victory of the season when they host the Prospect Knights Saturday afternoon. It will be a tough challenge for the Saxons, who have scored only three points this year coming on a 26-yard field goal by Jim Leonard against Wheeling.

AT PALATINE, the Pirates will also be going after their first win Saturday when Buffalo Grove visits. The Bison are 1-1.

Palatine's problem has been the second half, according to coach Arv Herstedt.

"The bottom just falls out on us in the second half, especially the fourth quarter," he said, referring to the fact that the Pirates have been outscored 27-0 after the intermission. "But the conference season is what counts. Buffalo Grove is the 1977 season for us now. We'll be up for this one."

In non-conference games, St. Viator (2-0) will be playing Notre Dame at 8 p.m. tonight. The contest will be played at Arlington High School. The Lions have beaten Hersey (21-6) and Weber (21-10).

Maine West (1-1) will travel to Waukegan East for a Saturday game. The Warriors hope to keep winning, which they did, 13-6, last weekend against Niles North.

Bert Blyleven fires no-hitter

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Bert Blyleven, a 26-year-old right-hander who had pitched four one-hitters during his eight-year career, hurled his first no-hitter and the third of the major-league season Thursday night when he faced only 28 batters in pitching the Texas Rangers to a 6-0 triumph over the California Angels.

Steve Cauthen here for Futurity

Steve Cauthen wears silk and rides like satin.

by JIM COOK

Steve Cauthen, the teen-age jockey sensation who has discovered the formula for turning Kentucky bluegrass into New York greenbacks, will be in the saddle for the rich Arlington Park Futurity at approximately 5:30 p.m. Saturday.

The baby-faced, candy bar-chomping millionaire is scheduled to appear in at least two other races on Saturday's Arlington Park card, but he'll be pointing toward the $233,275 Futurity aboard Sauce Boat.

Cauthen, who has rewritten virtually every record for single day, single week, single month and single season trips to the winner's circle, will be returning to the strip that helped launch his brilliant riding career, a career that is still in the infant stages at the shaveless age of 17.

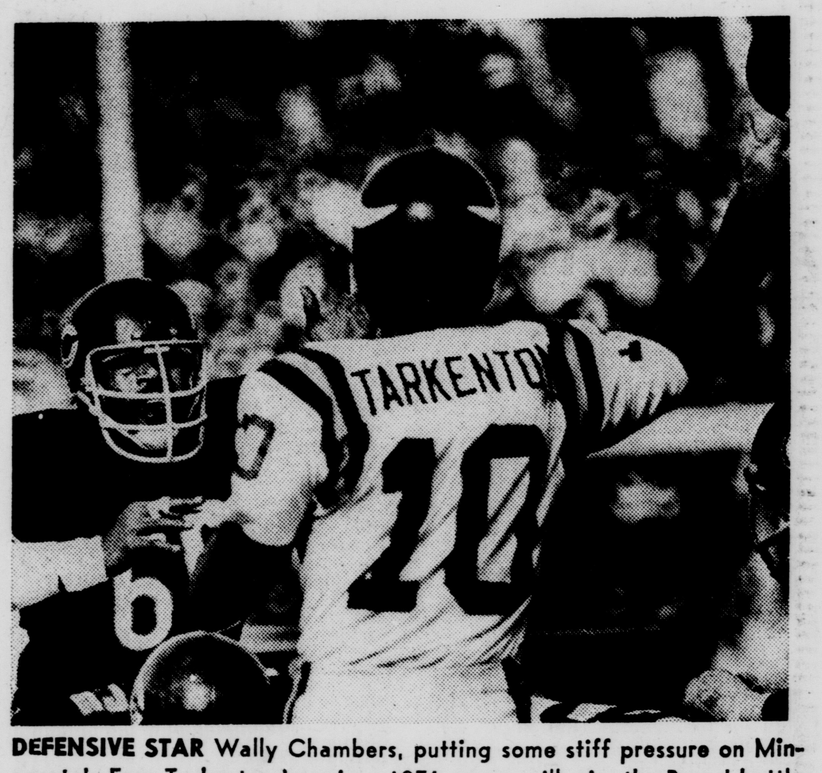
BUT HIS ABILITY, described even by Hall of Fame immortals like Johnny Longden and Ted Atkinson as "distinctively flawless," has accounted for more than 380 winners this year and over $4.3 million in purses. He's been first, second or third an amazing 855 times out of 1,550 races.

The secret is not in his appetite, which often resembles the thoroughbred he rides, but in his large authoritative hands that clutch the reins and crack the whip. His low-profile riding posture makes him seem and probably feel like a tattoo, rather than a 5-foot-1, 95-pound impost over the horse's shoulders.

Should Cauthen and Sauce Boat be first under the wire Saturday, Steve will pocket in excess of $14,000 for a ride which will last a minute and one-half.

A field of 15, including Historically, Star de Naskra, Hoist the Silver, Dewan Keys, Charbizon, Forever Casting, Jaycean, Silver Nitrate, Slap Jack and Bring the Money will challenge Sauce Boat.

The value to the winner will be $139,965 and strong consideration for 2-year-old Horse of the Year honors. The Jockey of the Year honor is already cut, dried and eating candy bars.



DEFENSIVE STAR Wally Chambers, putting some stiff pressure on Minnesota's Fran Tarkenton here in a 1976 game, will miss the Bears' battle in St. Louis Sunday because of knee problems. See Bob Gallas' story on Page 3.

Short people should stand up (on a box) and be counted

Bob Frisk

Sports Editor

It's time for all the short people in the world to unite.

Racial and ethnic minorities, women and homosexuals and even left-handers have their platforms, but nobody thinks about the little man or little woman. Where are their laws?

The world is full of short people, and we have not been placed here to make tall people feel superior. That's just what they like to think.

The average height of adult Americans today is 5 feet 9 inches (I'm average, that's a relief) and slightly over 5 feet 3½ inches for women.

PEOPLE REACT first to size when they meet a person, not to age. 'Short' unfortunately is a negative word — shortsighted, shorthanded, shortchanged.

'Short' means 'untall' to many.

Academic research appears to substantiate claims of discrimination against short persons. Do employers feel tall people fulfill an image? Do they feel that the blond Teutonic giant who comes hulking into the office is more intimidating and therefore a better salesman?

Just because Hitler stood 5-9 doesn't mean all short people are bad.

Short people, unite! Remember, we have a lot of company.

WHEN YOU suddenly realize you've stopped growing, a traumatic experience, you begin to identify with new heroes, the small people of the world.

I loved New York Yankees' shortstop Phil Rizzuto? Why? He came up to Mickey Mantle's waist.

Albie Pearson, who used to play major league baseball, would have been, had he been only six inches taller, almost 5-11.

Freddie Patek of the Kansas City Royals stands only 5-4, but it does get tiresome to keep hearing his name preceded by the standard obligatory diminuendo. Little Freddie Patek. Tiny Freddie Patek. Pint-sized Freddie Patek.

IT WAS THE SAME way when Eddie LeBaron was playing professional football. No quarterback was more majestically short, but the announcers made such a point of dwelling on his stature that for years, I thought Little was his first name.

Hack Wilson was only 5-6 when he was thumping home runs and driving in runs for the Cubs, but at 190 pounds, who noticed his height?

For everyone who has ever wondered why the racket is so large, or the net so high, for all those who would trade a lifetime of shortness for one long day of tallness on a tennis court, the hero must be Harold Solomon, all 66 inches and 140 pounds.

Soccer star Pele is only 5-9, and I've always had a special fondness for the ranks of short professional golfers — Rod Curl (5-5), Lee Trevino (5-7), Gary Player (5-8), Lanny Wadkins (5-8½), Ben Crenshaw (5-9), Gene Littler (5-9), Tom Watson (5-9) and Tony Jacklin (5-9).

EDDIE GAEDEL, of course is a sports legend to the short people of the world. Eddie was the midget Bill Veeck brought up to pinch hit in a baseball game.

The 3-foot-7, 85-pounder walked in his only appearance, was lifted for a pinch runner and one week later was ruled out of baseball forever. He passed out of the sports scene, according to some cynics, by simply growing smaller and smaller until he finally disappeared.

My all-time sports favorite was 5-5½ Tad Weed, a placekicker for the unbeaten Ohio State football team in 1954. I mean, how can you not favor a little guy with the name Tad?

"I just quit growing when I got to the ninth grade in Columbus," Weed recalled. I know how you feel, Tad.

From that ninth grade realization Weed stopped being a halfback and started being a place kicker. There were no scholarships for 5-5 kickers, but his father was doing well in the oil business.

WEED FIRST THOUGHT of Northwestern but then asked himself, "What am I doing? Columbus is the football capital of the world. Eighty-five thousand people at every game. I changed my mind and at the last minute enrolled at Ohio State."

Tad hung around with the halfbacks at the first practice, ran one play and was taken aside by a coach. "Forget it, son," he was told. "Here's a football. Just get off to one side and kick it."

Woody Hayes never let Weed kick off for fear he would be crushed by a 250-pounder. Tad didn't wear any pads on his hips or thighs. He was so small that wearing full pads shortened his range, so he only wore the helmet and shoulder pads.

Weed didn't miss an extra point in the Rose Bowl year. In the 1955 College All-Star game he kicked three field goals and sparked one of the rare college wins over the professionals.

TAD WAS CUT by the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League and picked up by the Pittsburgh Steelers. Pittsburgh never won a game in the half year he kicked, but he had played in the NFL at 5-5½.

Tad Weed was my favorite in sports, but I had another short hero in the movie business. Alan Ladd was my all-time favorite. The tough guy of the screen.

Ladd wasn't big. He wasn't in the Mickey Rooney class, but he was so short he needed a box to stand on to kiss many of his leading ladies.

Who cared? Alan Ladd won out in the end and was a giant among the short people of the world. He proved the little guy could wind up with the girl.

So what if John Wayne was big and tough. He usually spent the night with his horse.

WEED FIRST THOUGHT of Northwestern but then asked himself, "What am I doing? Columbus is the football capital of the world. Eighty-five thousand people at every game. I changed my mind and at the last minute enrolled at Ohio State."

Tad hung around with the halfbacks at the first practice, ran one play and was taken aside by a coach. "Forget it, son," he was told. "Here's a football. Just get off to one side and kick it."

Woody Hayes never let Weed kick off for fear he would be crushed by a 250-pounder. Tad didn't wear any pads on his hips or thighs. He was so small that wearing full pads shortened his range, so he only wore the helmet and shoulder pads.

Weed didn't miss an extra point in the Rose Bowl year. In the 1955 College All-Star game he kicked three field goals and sparked one of the rare college wins over the professionals.

TAD WAS CUT by the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League and picked up by the Pittsburgh Steelers. Pittsburgh never won a game in the half year he kicked, but he had played in the NFL at 5-5½.

Tad Weed was my favorite in sports, but I had another short hero in the movie business. Alan Ladd was my all-time favorite. The tough guy of the screen.

Ladd wasn't big. He wasn't in the Mickey Rooney class, but he was so short he needed a box to stand on to kiss many of his leading ladies.

Who cared? Alan Ladd won out in the end and was a giant among the short people of the world. He proved the little guy could wind up with the girl.

So what if John Wayne was big and tough. He usually spent the night with his horse.

Phils may wish pressure was on the Cubs

PHILADELPHIA — The conquering heroes, the Cubs, return home today after whipping the Eastern Division leading Phillies, 5-3, Thursday afternoon to take a best-of-three series, that decided absolutely nothing, two games to one.

Actually, the victory helped the Cubs move past St. Louis into sole possession of third place. The Wrigleys start a six-game homestand today with a single game against the second-place Pittsburgh Pirates. Twenty-game winner Rick Reuschel will pitch for the Cubs.

Larry Biittner was the hitting star Thursday against the Phils. His two-out seventh-inning single drove home the winning run as the Cubs froze Philadelphia's magic number at four.

THE WINNING pitcher was reliever Paul Reuschel, who took over for starter Dennis Lamp. Ace fireman Bruce Sutter gained the save with his usual able-bodied effort.

Loser Jim Lonborg, 10-4, walked Mick Kelleher to open the seventh. Kelleher moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by winner Paul Resuchel and to third after Garry Maddox made a spectacular running catch of Ivan DeJesus' drive to deep center. He then came home on the single by Biittner, who also drove in an insurance run with a single in the ninth.

Biittner also figured in the run that gave the Cubs a 3-2 lead in the sixth. He grounded to second but as Jay Johnstone tried to make the tag at first, Biittner knocked the ball away and scampered all the way to third, scoring two outs later on Steve Ontiveros' single.

The Phillies, however, came back to tie it in their half of the sixth on Bob Boone's sacrifice fly.

Lamp's two-run bases-loaded single had given the Cubs a 2-1 lead in the fifth. But Mike Schmidt's run-scoring triple tied the game in the bottom of the inning. Sutter pitched two scoreless innings for the Cubs and earned his 30th save.

White Sox treat Lemon to happy 57th birthday

SEATTLE — Ralph Garr's line triple to right center in the ninth scored Brian Downing from first as the White Sox celebrated manager Bob Lemon's 57th birthday. Chet Lemon added icing to the cake with a sacrifice fly as the Sox beat Seattle 5-4. Steve Renko struck out eight to pick up his fourth win.

While Renko kept the Mariners at bay through the first four innings, allowing just one hit, Chet Lemon gave the Sox an early lead.

Jumping on the first pitch of the third inning from starter Paul Mitchell, Lemon cracked his 19th home run of the season.

Lasting but another 2/3 inning, Mitchell gave way to reliever Rick Honeycutt as the Sox scored two more.

Brian Downing drove across the second run with a single to center. Honeycutt ended the inning by striking out Ralph Garr.

Leading 3-0 in the sixth, Renko, who had struck out three and yielded two scanty singles prior to the inning, was hit hard.

Designated hitter Steve Braun recorded his second straight single to start the inning. Craig Reynolds followed with another single to right to put two men on and nobody out.

Renko relieved a little pressure by retiring the next two hitters before the roof fell in. Finding the range in the first row of the left field seats, some 316 feet away, lefthanded Dan Meyer slugged a three-run homer to tie the game.

Renko struck out Lee Stanton to end the inning.

Honeycutt, in 3-1/3 innings of relief through the seventh, struck out three Sox while yielding a single to Ralph Garr.

White Sox home run leader Oscar Gamble was ejected in the fifth inning as he disputed a third strike call by umpire Russ Goetz.

From Daily Herald wire services

Lee May continued his torrid hitting by knocking in three runs with his 26th homer and powered Baltimore to a 7-1 rout of the Toronto Blue Jays within 1½ games of first place New York in the American League East.

May, who has driven in 15 runs in his last 10 games, unloaded his 299th career homer in the sixth inning with two men on after Ken Singleton had singled home a run for the Orioles' final three runs.

Mike Flanagan, 15-12, stopped the Blue Jays on six hits while Oriole rookie Eddie Murray lashed four of the 12 hits off three Toronto pitchers.

Steve Kemp, who has more RBI than any rookie in the league, stroked a two-run double in the middle of a four-run seventh inning which gave the Detroit Tigers a 5-4 victory over Boston and put a severe crimp in the Red Sox American League East division title hopes.

THE LOSS DROPPED Boston three full games behind the idle first-place New York Yankees, with only 10 games remaining.

Major league baseball

Rookie left-hander Dan Schatzeder tossed a six-hitter and singled in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning to lead the Montreal Expos to a 2-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals before a crowd of 5,233, smallest ever at Olympic Stadium.

Dave Concepcion's fifth-inning error paved the way for two runs and Gene Richards tied a record for most stolen bases by a rookie, leading the San Diego Padres to a 3-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Richards, a Padre outfielder, stole second in the third inning, his 39th theft of the season.

Brian Asselstine drove in three runs to lead the Atlanta Braves to an 8-4 victory over the Houston Astros.

Phils may wish pressure was on the Cubs

PHILADELPHIA — The conquering heroes, the Cubs, return home today after whipping the Eastern Division leading Phillies, 5-3, Thursday afternoon to take a best-of-three series, that decided absolutely nothing, two games to one.

Actually, the victory helped the Cubs move past St. Louis into sole possession of third place. The Wrigleys start a six-game homestand today with a single game against the second-place Pittsburgh Pirates. Twenty-game winner Rick Reuschel will pitch for the Cubs.

Larry Biittner was the hitting star Thursday against the Phils. His two-out seventh-inning single drove home the winning run as the Cubs froze Philadelphia's magic number at four.

THE WINNING pitcher was reliever Paul Reuschel, who took over for starter Dennis Lamp. Ace fireman Bruce Sutter gained the save with his usual able-bodied effort.

Loser Jim Lonborg, 10-4, walked Mick Kelleher to open the seventh. Kelleher moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by winner Paul Resuchel and to third after Garry Maddox made a spectacular running catch of Ivan DeJesus' drive to deep center. He then came home on the single by Biittner, who also drove in an insurance run with a single in the ninth.

Biittner also figured in the run that gave the Cubs a 3-2 lead in the sixth. He grounded to second but as Jay Johnstone tried to make the tag at first, Biittner knocked the ball away and scampered all the way to third, scoring two outs later on Steve Ontiveros' single.

The Phillies, however, came back to tie it in their half of the sixth on Bob Boone's sacrifice fly.

Lamp's two-run bases-loaded single had given the Cubs a 2-1 lead in the fifth. But Mike Schmidt's run-scoring triple tied the game in the bottom of the inning. Sutter pitched two scoreless innings for the Cubs and earned his 30th save.

White Sox treat Lemon to happy 57th birthday

SEATTLE — Ralph Garr's line triple to right center in the ninth scored Brian Downing from first as the White Sox celebrated manager Bob Lemon's 57th birthday. Chet Lemon added icing to the cake with a sacrifice fly as the Sox beat Seattle 5-4. Steve Renko struck out eight to pick up his fourth win.

While Renko kept the Mariners at bay through the first four innings, allowing just one hit, Chet Lemon gave the Sox an early lead.

Jumping on the first pitch of the third inning from starter Paul Mitchell, Lemon cracked his 19th home run of the season.

Lasting but another 2/3 inning, Mitchell gave way to reliever Rick Honeycutt as the Sox scored two more.

Brian Downing drove across the second run with a single to center. Honeycutt ended the inning by striking out Ralph Garr.

Leading 3-0 in the sixth, Renko, who had struck out three and yielded two scanty singles prior to the inning, was hit hard.

Designated hitter Steve Braun recorded his second straight single to start the inning. Craig Reynolds followed with another single to right to put two men on and nobody out.

Renko relieved a little pressure by retiring the next two hitters before the roof fell in. Finding the range in the first row of the left field seats, some 316 feet away, lefthanded Dan Meyer slugged a three-run homer to tie the game.

Renko struck out Lee Stanton to end the inning.

Honeycutt, in 3-1/3 innings of relief through the seventh, struck out three Sox while yielding a single to Ralph Garr.

White Sox home run leader Oscar Gamble was ejected in the fifth inning as he disputed a third strike call by umpire Russ Goetz.

From Daily Herald wire services

Lee May continued his torrid hitting by knocking in three runs with his 26th homer and powered Baltimore to a 7-1 rout of the Toronto Blue Jays within 1½ games of first place New York in the American League East.

May, who has driven in 15 runs in his last 10 games, unloaded his 299th career homer in the sixth inning with two men on after Ken Singleton had singled home a run for the Orioles' final three runs.

Mike Flanagan, 15-12, stopped the Blue Jays on six hits while Oriole rookie Eddie Murray lashed four of the 12 hits off three Toronto pitchers.

Steve Kemp, who has more RBI than any rookie in the league, stroked a two-run double in the middle of a four-run seventh inning which gave the Detroit Tigers a 5-4 victory over Boston and put a severe crimp in the Red Sox American League East division title hopes.

THE LOSS DROPPED Boston three full games behind the idle first-place New York Yankees, with only 10 games remaining.

Major league baseball

Rookie left-hander Dan Schatzeder tossed a six-hitter and singled in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning to lead the Montreal Expos to a 2-0 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals before a crowd of 5,233, smallest ever at Olympic Stadium.

Dave Concepcion's fifth-inning error paved the way for two runs and Gene Richards tied a record for most stolen bases by a rookie, leading the San Diego Padres to a 3-1 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Richards, a Padre outfielder, stole second in the third inning, his 39th theft of the season.

Brian Asselstine drove in three runs to lead the Atlanta Braves to an 8-4 victory over the Houston Astros.

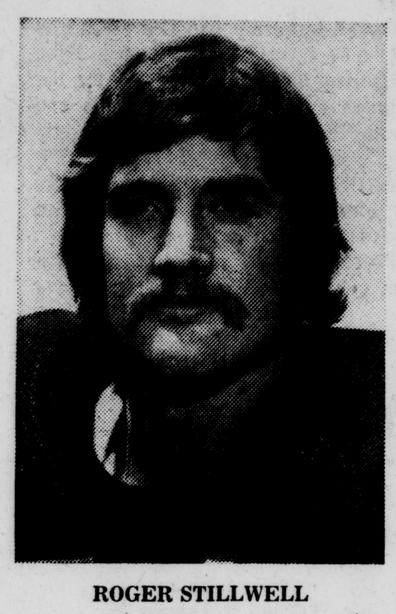
Cards' backfield safer; Chambers to miss game

by BOB GALLAS

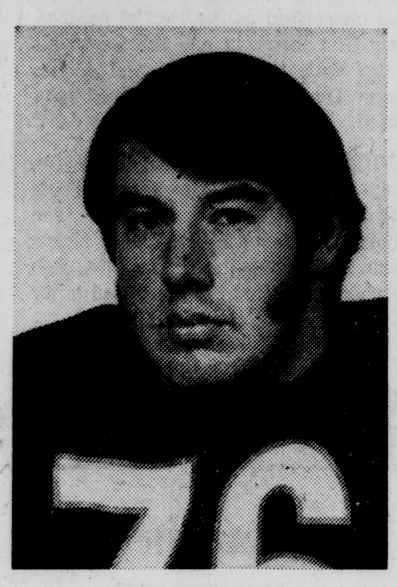
The up again, down again knee of Wally Chambers was down again Thursday as the Bears announced their star defensive tackle will enter the hospital today for minor knee surgery and will miss Sunday's game in St. Louis.

"He's going to have the right knee irrigated," said Bears coach Jack Pardee, who explained the knee would be flushed of loose bone and calcium particles. Only the day before, Pardee had been explaining how Chambers' knee was giving him a little pain, but not enough to keep him out of Sunday's contest.

Chambers will be in the hospital only one day and is expected to be back in action next Sunday, if the knee responds to treatment. Chambers had the knee irrigated after he originally hurt it playing in January's Pro Bowl. He was playing basketball for the Bears' team one week later.



ROGER STILLWELL



RON RYDALCH

"THERE'S NO guarantee this will solve his problems," said Pardee. "But it won't make him any worse."

Chambers' knee problem is strikingly similar to tackle Lionel Antoine's. Antoine is sitting out the year on the injured reserved list and Bear officials have expressed concern that Antoine's arthritic knee may spell the end of his career. Though it's too early to tell about Chambers, there was speculation Thursday that he may have the same problem as Antoine.

While the news of Chambers being scratched from the lineup may cheer up the Cardinals, the Bears seemed virtually unconcerned, primarily because Chambers has seen little action so far this season.

"We had to get ready for St. Louis without Wally anyway, hoping he could get in there," said Pardee. Chambers played little in Sunday's 30-20 win over Detroit and hasn't been able to practice this week because of pain.

"WE'RE USED TO playing without him," said defensive end Jerry Meyers, who toils next to Chambers on the right side. But Meyers admits his work is tougher with Chambers out of the lineup.

"He takes the pressure off when he's in there," Meyers explained. "If you make a mistake, he's so quick he can often cover for you. He's such a playmaker he makes things happen. When he's in there, the offense is always thinking about him."

Middle linebacker Don Rives offered similar sentiments. "It's nice when he's in there but I would hope our defense is better than one person," Rives said. "The whole concept of our defense is centered around a team effort, not one man."

Pardee said Ron Rydalch will move into Chambers' spot and Roger Stillwell will move over as backup left defensive tackle to fill in for Chambers also.

BEAR FACTS: Chambers will join injured safety Doug Plank on the two-man taxi squad this weekend which means offensive tackle Dan Jiggetts, who sat out last Sunday's game, will be on the active roster this Sunday . . Plank is listed as a "doubtful" starter which means there's a 25 per cent chance he will play, though the chance is probably more remote than that . . . Plank got the cast off his sprained knee on Tuesday and may start running today.

Kite, Calfee lead Kings Island Open

MASON, Ohio — Tom Kite, consistently sinking long putts of 20, 25 and 35 feet, and Bill Calfee, playing the best golf of his short career, shot sizzling 4-under-par 66s Thursday to share the first-round lead in the $150,000 Ohio Kings Island Open.

Kite, of Horseshoe Bay, Tex., fired a 31-35, while Calfee, of Tampa, Fla., shot a steady 33-33, over the par-70, Jack Nicklaus Golf Center course.

Nicklaus, who designed the course, shot a 3-over-par 73 and was back in the pack.

Eight golfers came in with 2-under-par 68s — Mike Hill, Bob Zender, Jack Spradlin, Mike Sullivan, Allen Miller, Don Pooley, Craig Stradler and Tony Cerda.

Among a cluster at 69 were Leonard Thompson, Bob Wynn, Andy North, Bobby Nichols and Tommy Aaron.

Nicklaus wasn't alone among the big names having trouble. Miller Barber, who won the tourney in 1974, shot 72, PGA champ Lanny Wadkins had a 71, as did Bruce Lietzke, who is fifth on the money list.

The field of 156 shooting for the $30,000 first place will be trimmed to the low 70 and ties after Friday's second round.

Kroc names Fontaine new Padre GM

SAN DIEGO — Bob Fontaine, who has been with the club since it was formed in 1969, Thursday was named vice president and general manager of the San Diego Padres by Ray Kroc, owner of the National League team.

Fontaine's appointment followed by less than two days the surprise resignation of Buzzie Bavasi, the club's president who also functioned as general manager.

The 53-year-old Fontaine had served as the club's director of player personnel since the middle of 1976. Prior to that, he was director of scouting.

"I am sorry to be replacing a great personal friend in Buzzie Bavasi, but at the same time I am thrilled at the honor bestowed on me by Mr. Kroc," Fontaine said. "I believe we have the beginning of a fine ball club and we won't rest until we have accomplished our goal of making this team a pennant contender in the National League Western Division."

Finley back in form, promotes Page

Oakland A's owner Charlie O. Finley, who underwent a successful coronary bypass operation last week, felt good enough Thursday to promote one of his ball players for rookie of the year honors.

"I'm feeling fine," Finley said in a telephone call to UPI. "If I felt any better I'd get arrested. The doctors think I'll be out of her maybe Sunday or Monday."

Finley, 59, said he was calling to "suggest" that baseball writers consider Oakland A's outfielder Mitchell Page for rookie of the year.

"Things for the Oakland A's this year just haven't been too bright, you might say, since we've been Kuhnized," Finley said, referring to Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who nullified the sale of three of Finley's ball players to other clubs.

"We have had one bright light continuously shining in the A's organization and that has been Mitchell 'The Rage' Page."

As of Thursday, Page's batting average was .310, with 72 RBIs, 20 homers, 143 hits and 37 stolen bases. He was obtained by Oakland last year in a trade with Pittsburgh.

Governor Skipper wins Brown Jug

DELAWARE, Ohio — Favored Governor Skipper led from wire to wire in both heats Thursday to capture the 32nd running of the Little Brown Jug three-year-old pacing classic at the Delaware County Fairgrounds with a record-setting performance.

Governor Skipper, owned by the Ivanhoe Stables of Chicago and driven expertly by John Chapman, won the first heat of the $150,000 Jug by 4½ lengths in a world record time of 1:56 1-5 and came back to take the second heat by a length-and-three-quarters, only one-tenth of a second slower.

The Governor's 1:56 1-5 in the opening heat bettered the previous mark for a three-year-old pacer of 1:56 2-5 on a half-mile track set by Keystone Ore a year ago at Saratoga Springs, N.Y. The Governor's two heat total of 3:52 4-5 also set a new world record.

Meadows pulls surprise in soccer

by KEITH REINHARD

Gary Cook drilled home his seventh goal of the campaign late in the first half and it held up as Rolling Meadows surprised Elk Grove in a key Mid-Suburban League South Division soccer confrontation Thursday.

The 1-0 verdict was the first Mustang triumph in division play and the first setback absorbed by the Grenadiers. Cook's goal occurred after he initially missed and the shot rebounded off the crossbar, giving him a second opportunity.

Hoffman Estates blanked Prospect by a similar 1-0 count Thursday. In other games Fremd stormed past Hersey, Wheeling nipped Palatine, Barrington trimmed Arlington and Forest View shut out Buffalo Grove.

Frank Mueller tallied the Hoffman goal unassisted as the Hawks notched their first loop win and third over-all to go with three losses and a tie. Ralph Tooren was the unscored-upon goalie.

FREMD AND WHEELING set the stage for their showdown next Tuesday by remaining undefeated. The Vikes were paced by two Jerry Norys goals in toppling the Huskies 5-1. Bob Bischoff and Kurt Blechner had other Fremd scores and a fifth was accidentally knocked in by Hersey.

For the Huskies, now 0-6-1, John Mantanes knocked in his 10th goal of the season assisted by Kevin Hastings.

ANDREAS DEUTSCHMANN, Randy Stewart and Tim Dowell rippled the net for Palatine.

Forest View bounced back into the win column with a 4-0 triumph over the Bison. Tim Sroka haded up the Falcon attack with a pair of goals while Nick Racz and Steve Hirsch contributed one apiece.

In sophomore action Thursday, Palatine stopped Wheeling 4-2, Elk Grove blanked Meadows 2-0, Barrington turned back the Cardinals 3-0, Hoffman and Prospect played to a 3-3 tie and Fremd and Hersey were involved in a 1-1 standoff.

Kite, Calfee lead Kings Island Open

MASON, Ohio — Tom Kite, consistently sinking long putts of 20, 25 and 35 feet, and Bill Calfee, playing the best golf of his short career, shot sizzling 4-under-par 66s Thursday to share the first-round lead in the $150,000 Ohio Kings Island Open.

Kite, of Horseshoe Bay, Tex., fired a 31-35, while Calfee, of Tampa, Fla., shot a steady 33-33, over the par-70, Jack Nicklaus Golf Center course.

Nicklaus, who designed the course, shot a 3-over-par 73 and was back in the pack.

Defending champ Ben Crenshaw was right behind the leaders with a 33-34—67.

Eight golfers came in with 2-under-par 68s — Mike Hill, Bob Zender, Jack Spradlin, Mike Sullivan, Allen Miller, Don Pooley, Craig Stradler and Tony Cerda.

Among a cluster at 69 were Leonard Thompson, Bob Wynn, Andy North, Bobby Nichols and Tommy Aaron.

Nicklaus wasn't alone among the big names having trouble. Miller Barber, who won the tourney in 1974, shot 72, PGA champ Lanny Wadkins had a 71, as did Bruce Lietzke, who is fifth on the money list.

The field of 156 shooting for the $30,000 first place will be trimmed to the low 70 and ties after Friday's second round.

Kroc names Fontaine new Padre GM

SAN DIEGO — Bob Fontaine, who has been with the club since it was formed in 1969, Thursday was named vice president and general manager of the San Diego Padres by Ray Kroc, owner of the National League team.

Fontaine's appointment followed by less than two days the surprise resignation of Buzzie Bavasi, the club's president who also functioned as general manager.

The 53-year-old Fontaine had served as the club's director of player personnel since the middle of 1976. Prior to that, he was director of scouting.

"I am sorry to be replacing a great personal friend in Buzzie Bavasi, but at the same time I am thrilled at the honor bestowed on me by Mr. Kroc," Fontaine said. "I believe we have the beginning of a fine ball club and we won't rest until we have accomplished our goal of making this team a pennant contender in the National League Western Division."

Finley back in form, promotes Page

Oakland A's owner Charlie O. Finley, who underwent a successful coronary bypass operation last week, felt good enough Thursday to promote one of his ball players for rookie of the year honors.

"I'm feeling fine," Finley said in a telephone call to UPI. "If I felt any better I'd get arrested. The doctors think I'll be out of her maybe Sunday or Monday."

Finley, 59, said he was calling to "suggest" that baseball writers consider Oakland A's outfielder Mitchell Page for rookie of the year.

"Things for the Oakland A's this year just haven't been too bright, you might say, since we've been Kuhnized," Finley said, referring to Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, who nullified the sale of three of Finley's ball players to other clubs.

"We have had one bright light continuously shining in the A's organization and that has been Mitchell 'The Rage' Page."

As of Thursday, Page's batting average was .310, with 72 RBIs, 20 homers, 143 hits and 37 stolen bases. He was obtained by Oakland last year in a trade with Pittsburgh.

Governor Skipper wins Brown Jug

DELAWARE, Ohio — Favored Governor Skipper led from wire to wire in both heats Thursday to capture the 32nd running of the Little Brown Jug three-year-old pacing classic at the Delaware County Fairgrounds with a record-setting performance.

Governor Skipper, owned by the Ivanhoe Stables of Chicago and driven expertly by John Chapman, won the first heat of the $150,000 Jug by 4½ lengths in a world record time of 1:56 1-5 and came back to take the second heat by a length-and-three-quarters, only one-tenth of a second slower.

The Governor's 1:56 1-5 in the opening heat bettered the previous mark for a three-year-old pacer of 1:56 2-5 on a half-mile track set by Keystone Ore a year ago at Saratoga Springs, N.Y. The Governor's two heat total of 3:52 4-5 also set a new world record.

Governor Skipper, who earned $75,750 for the Jug victory, boosting his 1977 earnings to $342,837 and his lifetime total to $457,992, was an awesome sight in both heats.

Meadows pulls surprise in soccer

by KEITH REINHARD

Gary Cook drilled home his seventh goal of the campaign late in the first half and it held up as Rolling Meadows surprised Elk Grove in a key Mid-Suburban League South Division soccer confrontation Thursday.

The 1-0 verdict was the first Mustang triumph in division play and the first setback absorbed by the Grenadiers. Cook's goal occurred after he initially missed and the shot rebounded off the crossbar, giving him a second opportunity.

Hoffman Estates blanked Prospect by a similar 1-0 count Thursday. In other games Fremd stormed past Hersey, Wheeling nipped Palatine, Barrington trimmed Arlington and Forest View shut out Buffalo Grove.

Frank Mueller tallied the Hoffman goal unassisted as the Hawks notched their first loop win and third over-all to go with three losses and a tie. Ralph Tooren was the unscored-upon goalie.

FREMD AND WHEELING set the stage for their showdown next Tuesday by remaining undefeated. The Vikes were paced by two Jerry Norys goals in toppling the Huskies 5-1. Bob Bischoff and Kurt Blechner had other Fremd scores and a fifth was accidentally knocked in by Hersey.

For the Huskies, now 0-6-1, John Mantanes knocked in his 10th goal of the season assisted by Kevin Hastings.

Wheeling barely escaped from the Pirates with a 4-3 win. Mike McQuivey had a pair of goals for the winners and Rainer Engelmann and Louis Restrepo accounted for the other 'Cat scores.

ANDREAS DEUTSCHMANN, Randy Stewart and Tim Dowell rippled the net for Palatine.

Forest View bounced back into the win column with a 4-0 triumph over the Bison. Tim Sroka haded up the Falcon attack with a pair of goals while Nick Racz and Steve Hirsch contributed one apiece.

In sophomore action Thursday, Palatine stopped Wheeling 4-2, Elk Grove blanked Meadows 2-0, Barrington turned back the Cardinals 3-0, Hoffman and Prospect played to a 3-3 tie and Fremd and Hersey were involved in a 1-1 standoff.

Rock Valley to test Harper

The Harper College football team faces another "crucial test" when it plays Rock Valley Saturday at 1:30 p.m. in Rockford.

"This one's critical in terms of whether we have the ability to bounce back from defeat," said John Eliasik, the Hawk coach.

He added that last Saturday's game with Illinois Valley was crucial to see how his Hawks could compete against a team that is a contender for the state title. The result was a 27-7 defeat as the Apaches used that victory to more into the 10th spot in the national junior college rankings.

ROCK VALLEY has a 2-0 record with victories against Wright and Kennedy-King, a team that the Hawks beat in the season opener. Eliasik said that his players have looked good in practice this week.

"But I thought we were prepared last week," he said. "It's a matter of putting it together on the field."

The Hawks could muster only 112 total yards against the powerful Illinois Valley Apaches, who gained 332. In the first two contests combined, Harper has a 633-313 deficit in total yardage. Ricky Williams has been the leading rusher with 63 years while Bill Strawn leads the receivers with 60.

"Rock Valley won't physically outmatch us, but I thing they've got a little more experience, as most teams will this year," said Eliasik of his young Hawks.

If you can't fly—try running

Art Mugalian

Byline report

Sometimes the best advice is no advice at all, as in the case of the young man who wanted to learn how to fly.

He searched far and wide for the magic of flight, sounding out experts in aviation and aerodynamics. No one could help him until a wise man told him the secret of flight and all other worldly ventures.

"Do what you think is right," said the sage, looking suitably cryptic. "Whatever you feel is the best way to fly is therefore the best way to fly. Now, go and fly."

THE YOUNG MAN rushed off in his excitement, anxious to put the secret of flight to his test. He jumped off a cliff and was never heard from again.

The lesson to be learned is "if flying doesn't come naturally, don't fly."

Of course, the wise man's advice was sound, despite the result. If you want to do something that you have never done before, depend only on your own instincts. Value your judgment above all else.

Then go out and fail.

However, if you plan to run in the first Mayor Daley Marathon Sunday morning, it wouldn't hurt to consult an expert or two before you embark on the 26-mile jog, especially if Sunday will be your first attempt at such an epic distance.

PROBABLY THE wisest counsel that anybody could take would be "visit a doctor before the race." The sponsors would like to see everybody back for next year's marathon.

Once you get a medical clearance, you can begin making the more mundane plans and preparations, such as what to wear, what to eat before the race, what to drink during the race and where to collapse after the race.

For the answers to some of these weighty marathon questions, we cornered one of the race favorites, Schaumburg cross country coach Jim Macnider, who owns one of the top five seeded times, a 2:23 at the Paavo Nurmi Marathon in August.

"The key is to wear the most comfortable clothes you can," said Macnider, who will be decked out in nylon running shorts and sleeveless shirt.

"If it's really cold," he said, "then I would wear layers of clothes in the order of the way I'd want to take them off. And I'd wear things that I wouldn't mind losing."

MACNIDER WON'T wear socks, but he runs in special racing shoes that have no seams to irritate the feet. Any extra friction will cause problems.

"I take vaseline and rub it between my toes," he said. "And I put powder in my shoes — not too much — you know, Dr. Scholl's Foot Powder."

Macnider recommended vaseline under the arms for runners who carry their arms close to their body. He also suggested band-aids across the nipples to protect against irritation from cotton tee-shirts. Something for the head — either a sweat-absorbing hat or a headband — is also a good idea, he said.

"If you're just going out for a six or seven mile run, you don't have to think about some of these things," said Macnider. "But when you multiply that four or five times you can get really sore. Everything is compounded."

THE REALLY SERIOUS marathoners, like Macinider, have followed a week-long diet designed to provide maximum energy for the race. Macnider consumed only protein through Thursday, then planned to load up on carbohydrates.

"For anybody else, I would suggest that they concentrate on eating a little more carbohydrates than proteins," he said. "Then eat nothing the 12 hours before the race.

The last time he ran a marathon, Macnider drank a bottle of Gatorade and popped six fructose tablets the morning of the race. "Orange juice is really too heavy," he said.

During the race itself, Macnider said, he will take at least a swallow of water every three miles after the first nine. "It depends on the heat," he said. "But water is the best thing — they say nothing else can help you."

Macnider would like to finish in the top 10, a goal that is out of the question for 99 per cent of the 5,000 runners who will step off the curb Sunday morning. For them, simply finishing the race will be a personal achievement of a lifetime.

"Actually, your body is a lot stronger than you think," Macnider said. "Usually, it's your mind that holds you back. But with all those people watching, that can keep you going. Of course, when you start feeing bad, nothing can urge you on."

Thanks, coach.

Art Mugalian

Byline report

Sometimes the best advice is no advice at all, as in the case of the young man who wanted to learn how to fly.

He searched far and wide for the magic of flight, sounding out experts in aviation and aerodynamics. No one could help him until a wise man told him the secret of flight and all other worldly ventures.

"Do what you think is right," said the sage, looking suitably cryptic. "Whatever you feel is the best way to fly is therefore the best way to fly. Now, go and fly."

THE YOUNG MAN rushed off in his excitement, anxious to put the secret of flight to his test. He jumped off a cliff and was never heard from again.

The lesson to be learned is "if flying doesn't come naturally, don't fly."

Of course, the wise man's advice was sound, despite the result. If you want to do something that you have never done before, depend only on your own instincts. Value your judgment above all else.

Then go out and fail.

However, if you plan to run in the first Mayor Daley Marathon Sunday morning, it wouldn't hurt to consult an expert or two before you embark on the 26-mile jog, especially if Sunday will be your first attempt at such an epic distance.

PROBABLY THE wisest counsel that anybody could take would be "visit a doctor before the race." The sponsors would like to see everybody back for next year's marathon.

Once you get a medical clearance, you can begin making the more mundane plans and preparations, such as what to wear, what to eat before the race, what to drink during the race and where to collapse after the race.

For the answers to some of these weighty marathon questions, we cornered one of the race favorites, Schaumburg cross country coach Jim Macnider, who owns one of the top five seeded times, a 2:23 at the Paavo Nurmi Marathon in August.

"The key is to wear the most comfortable clothes you can," said Macnider, who will be decked out in nylon running shorts and sleeveless shirt.

"If it's really cold," he said, "then I would wear layers of clothes in the order of the way I'd want to take them off. And I'd wear things that I wouldn't mind losing."

MACNIDER WON'T wear socks, but he runs in special racing shoes that have no seams to irritate the feet. Any extra friction will cause problems.

"I take vaseline and rub it between my toes," he said. "And I put powder in my shoes — not too much — you know, Dr. Scholl's Foot Powder."

Macnider recommended vaseline under the arms for runners who carry their arms close to their body. He also suggested band-aids across the nipples to protect against irritation from cotton tee-shirts. Something for the head — either a sweat-absorbing hat or a headband — is also a good idea, he said.

"If you're just going out for a six or seven mile run, you don't have to think about some of these things," said Macnider. "But when you multiply that four or five times you can get really sore. Everything is compounded."

THE REALLY SERIOUS marathoners, like Macinider, have followed a week-long diet designed to provide maximum energy for the race. Macnider consumed only protein through Thursday, then planned to load up on carbohydrates.

"For anybody else, I would suggest that they concentrate on eating a little more carbohydrates than proteins," he said. "Then eat nothing the 12 hours before the race.

The last time he ran a marathon, Macnider drank a bottle of Gatorade and popped six fructose tablets the morning of the race. "Orange juice is really too heavy," he said.

During the race itself, Macnider said, he will take at least a swallow of water every three miles after the first nine. "It depends on the heat," he said. "But water is the best thing — they say nothing else can help you."

Macnider would like to finish in the top 10, a goal that is out of the question for 99 per cent of the 5,000 runners who will step off the curb Sunday morning. For them, simply finishing the race will be a personal achievement of a lifetime.

"Actually, your body is a lot stronger than you think," Macnider said. "Usually, it's your mind that holds you back. But with all those people watching, that can keep you going. Of course, when you start feeing bad, nothing can urge you on."

Thanks, coach.

Fremd harriers win 62nd straight

by ART MUGALIAN

Roy Hascup's Little Green Army won another dual meet Thursday night, 21-40.

It was the 62nd straight dual victory for the Army, better known as the Fremd cross country team. This time the Vikings' victim was a strong Hersey team, whose coach, Larry Travis, had hopes of winning this one.

"We knew that Mr. Travis had a good runner in Steve Johnson and a good foursome," said Hascup, in his first full year of coaching Fremd's five-time defending MSL champions.

BUT THE VIKINGS think very little about the opponent and even less about the dual-meet streak that stretches back to 1971.

"We try to keep the pressure off the kids when it comes to that streak," Hascup said. "Instead we talk about courses we're going to run and times we want to hit for mile and two-mile splits. We have a lot of sub-goals to meet."

Against Hersey, Hascup wanted his leaders — Matt Filosa, Tom Ross, and Dan Inbody — to run the first mile in about 4:55. They came close — Filosa, the eventual winner, ran it in 4:52.

FILOSA WON THE race in 15:31, a new record on Fremd's makeshift Union Oil course. Hersey's Rich Rieger was second in 15:36, followed by Ross, Inbody and Johnson.

"This is a long three miles," said Hascup. "It's not a hilly course, but there are lots of long inclines. My kids like to run hills, though."

After Hersey's Johnson, Fremd bunched Mike Warren, Ed Martinez, Bob Ratcliffe and Phil Bush in front of the Huskies' next runner. The Vikes' top five finishers were just :22 apart.

"We're like an army," said Hascup. "If one of us falls down another one comes up to take his place."

ANOTHER CROSS country army, Palatine, kept pace with Fremd by whipping Wheeling, 23-36, despite the fact three of the Pirate troops were out of action. With Jon Laegeler on the sidelines with an injury and Tom Johnson and Kevin Nikolai dropping out of the race because of various ailments, Palatine's Chuck Elliott led the way to victory.

Elliott outdueled Wheeling's Ben Sanchez for first while Palatine's Jon Dahlgren finished third. Jim Lancaster, Tim Kohn and Mark Grimes picked up the slack for the stricken Pirates.

Johnson was spiked in a race on Monday and Laegeler re-injured his knee in the same meet. Nikolai sprained an ankle during Wednesday's workout.

In the only other North Division meet, Arlington nipped Barrington, 26-29, as Jim Lear, Pete Long and Tom Tremblay finished first, third and fourth for the Cardinals.

"WE LOST THE race in the last 200 yards," said Bronco coach George Sladek, who watched Arlington's Jim Wright pass Barrington's fifth man just outside the chute.

In the South Division, Hoffman Estates and Prospect, both unbeaten, rolled toward their anticipated Oct. 6 clash with impressive victories Thursday. Hoffman beat Schaumburg, 22-39, and Prospect blanked Rolling Meadows, 15-50.

"Our kids ran really well," said Schaumburg coach Jim Macnider, "but Hoffman ran better."

Doug Hirschberg of Hoffman beat Schaumburg's Tom Placek with a kick and Hirschberg's teammate Joe Storm finished third ahead of Saxon Keith Mazikowski. But after that, the Hawks placed six in front of Schaumburg's third man.

PROSPECT, LED by Mark Smith's 14:09, ran away from the host Mus-tangs. "All the kids ran good," said Knight coach Joe Wanner. "I was especially pleased with Jimmy Stewart, a junior who has never run before this season."

Stewart was seventh, ahead of Meadows' first finisher.

Forest View delighted coach Bill Mohrmann with a double win over Elk Grove, 15-44, and nonleague foe Lake Forest, 28-29, as Mike Yaccino and Jeff Kloster continued to lead the Falcons' improvement.

In an MSL crossover, Buffalo Grove stopped Conant, 15-48, as the Bison, led by Joe Schmidt, put six runners under 17:00 for the first time this year.

Fremd harriers win 62nd straight

by ART MUGALIAN

Roy Hascup's Little Green Army won another dual meet Thursday night, 21-40.

It was the 62nd straight dual victory for the Army, better known as the Fremd cross country team. This time the Vikings' victim was a strong Hersey team, whose coach, Larry Travis, had hopes of winning this one.

"We knew that Mr. Travis had a good runner in Steve Johnson and a good foursome," said Hascup, in his first full year of coaching Fremd's five-time defending MSL champions.

BUT THE VIKINGS think very little about the opponent and even less about the dual-meet streak that stretches back to 1971.

"We try to keep the pressure off the kids when it comes to that streak," Hascup said. "Instead we talk about courses we're going to run and times we want to hit for mile and two-mile splits. We have a lot of sub-goals to meet."

Against Hersey, Hascup wanted his leaders — Matt Filosa, Tom Ross, and Dan Inbody — to run the first mile in about 4:55. They came close — Filosa, the eventual winner, ran it in 4:52.

FILOSA WON THE race in 15:31, a new record on Fremd's makeshift Union Oil course. Hersey's Rich Rieger was second in 15:36, followed by Ross, Inbody and Johnson.

"This is a long three miles," said Hascup. "It's not a hilly course, but there are lots of long inclines. My kids like to run hills, though."

After Hersey's Johnson, Fremd bunched Mike Warren, Ed Martinez, Bob Ratcliffe and Phil Bush in front of the Huskies' next runner. The Vikes' top five finishers were just :22 apart.

"We're like an army," said Hascup. "If one of us falls down another one comes up to take his place."

ANOTHER CROSS country army, Palatine, kept pace with Fremd by whipping Wheeling, 23-36, despite the fact three of the Pirate troops were out of action. With Jon Laegeler on the sidelines with an injury and Tom Johnson and Kevin Nikolai dropping out of the race because of various ailments, Palatine's Chuck Elliott led the way to victory.

Elliott outdueled Wheeling's Ben Sanchez for first while Palatine's Jon Dahlgren finished third. Jim Lancaster, Tim Kohn and Mark Grimes picked up the slack for the stricken Pirates.

Johnson was spiked in a race on Monday and Laegeler re-injured his knee in the same meet. Nikolai sprained an ankle during Wednesday's workout.

In the only other North Division meet, Arlington nipped Barrington, 26-29, as Jim Lear, Pete Long and Tom Tremblay finished first, third and fourth for the Cardinals.

"WE LOST THE race in the last 200 yards," said Bronco coach George Sladek, who watched Arlington's Jim Wright pass Barrington's fifth man just outside the chute.

In the South Division, Hoffman Estates and Prospect, both unbeaten, rolled toward their anticipated Oct. 6 clash with impressive victories Thursday. Hoffman beat Schaumburg, 22-39, and Prospect blanked Rolling Meadows, 15-50.

"Our kids ran really well," said Schaumburg coach Jim Macnider, "but Hoffman ran better."

Doug Hirschberg of Hoffman beat Schaumburg's Tom Placek with a kick and Hirschberg's teammate Joe Storm finished third ahead of Saxon Keith Mazikowski. But after that, the Hawks placed six in front of Schaumburg's third man.

PROSPECT, LED by Mark Smith's 14:09, ran away from the host Mustangs. "All the kids ran good," said Knight coach Joe Wanner. "I was especially pleased with Jimmy Stewart, a junior who has never run before this season."

Stewart was seventh, ahead of Meadows' first finisher.

Forest View delighted coach Bill Mohrmann with a double win over Elk Grove, 15-44, and nonleague foe Lake Forest, 28-29, as Mike Yaccino and Jeff Kloster continued to lead the Falcons' improvement.

In an MSL crossover, Buffalo Grove stopped Conant, 15-48, as the Bison, led by Joe Schmidt, put six runners under 17:00 for the first time this year.

Fremd back in fast start

Hungry Weaver feasts on yards

by KEITH REINHARD

Last year Fremd High School's flashy tailback Kevin Weaver spent a whole nine-game season accumulating 327 yards worth of rushing.

Of course, he was alternating with Tom Philippe in Viking backfield and sharing ball-carrying duties with a whole stable full of runners.

"This year Kevin realized it was a different story," reports Vike head coach Joe Samojedny. "We knew before the season started that we wanted him to be our main man back there and I guess it's made Kevin very hungry to succeed."

HUNGRY? How about starved? In just two contests the 5-11, 180-pound senior has rushed for 323 yards already to easily lead the area ground-gaining statistics. Along the way his team has annexed a pair of impressive triumphs to rank among the top teams in Chicagoland.

"He hasn't gotten too bloated up over all the attention though...the other kids see it to that," adds Samojedny.

"Kevin gets a lot of ribbing from his teammates...they tell him to try on a bigger helmet for size...but actually he's the first to credit the other players for his success."

The Viking skipper notes that by relating to his linemen and fellow backs, pointing to their efforts in opening the holes and laying down the blocks, that they work all the harder in his, as well as the team's, behalf.

AN ABOVE average student who also is a catcher during the baseball season, Weaver can do more than just run with the football. "He can throw well and he's an excellent receiver too, but his forte is still as a runner. He always runs with his head up and he has the ability to make a lot of nice off-speed moves without ever losing momentum."

Weaver centainly shows no signs of losing momentum in the Daily Herald area rushing department..

Barrington earns volleyball win

by JEFF NORDLUND

Led by some excellent defense, Barrington's undefeated girls volleyball team handed visiting Palatine its first Mid-Suburban League loss, winning 20-5, 20-13 Thursday.

In other MSL volleyball action, Hersey downed Wheeling, Arlington stopped Buffalo Grove, Rolling Meadows defeated Conant, Prospect downed Elk Grove and Fremd beat Hoffman Estates.

"Co-captain Sue Meinhard had a very good night defensively for us," Barrington coach Maggie Atols said afterward. "Our defense was sound over-all, and the girls really hustled."

TERRY BAGLEY, Carrie Prewitt and Katrina McClanahan also scored well in their defensive ratings, along with Meinhard, helping the Broncos to their second MSL victory in as many tries.

Nancy Barnes turned a solid performance serving for Palatine.

Debbie Barnd of Hersey boosted the Huskies to a 16-20, 20-11, 20-16 victory over Wheeling elsewhere in the North Division.

"Debbie played terrifically today," Hersay coach Kay Duba said. "She kept us together on defense. Even though I felt this wasn't one of our better matches, I thing we showed we could come from behind."

DUBA ALSO credited setters Beth Frye and Patty Passas with good play. Chris Rathje scored highest for Wheeling with a 1.5 rating is setting.

After losing its first game 11-20, Arlington rallied to defeat Buffalo Grove with wins of 20-12 and 20-1. Karen Vobel scored 15 points in a row during the second and third games. Judy Satikas also was strong serving, while Rosey Schumacher spiked well.

In the South Division, Rolling Meadows ran its league record to 3-0 with a convincing 20-8, 20-11 defeat of Conant. JoAnn Wissen rated 1.7 setting, and Leslie Ahr had an even 2.0 in serving for Meadows' top scorer.

Prospect with a 2-0 record stayed right behind Meadows by downing Elk Grove 16-20, 20-12, 20-13. Jeannine Hahn earned a high rating in defense and spiking, while etammate Peggy McEneely was strong setting.

FOREST VIEW stopped Schaumburg 13-20, 20-13, 20-14 in a match featuring plenty of floor play. Both teams are starting nearly all new teams this season.

In a North-South match-up, Fremd defeated Hoffman Estates 20-18, 13-20, 20-1. Winning coach Dorothy Martin praised the play of Barb Brandt, Lisa Heath, Sue Sieorakowski and Patty Wojek.

Conant hosts soph golf meet Saturday

The sophomore golf team at Conant will host a 14-team Invitational meet Saturday at Hilldale, the school's home course. Other Mid-Suburban League teams competing will be Hoffman Estates and Rolling Meadows.

Don't Waste Fuel Dollars

First, some straight talk

Let's face it. It costs you more every year to heat or cool your home no matter what type of fuel you use. And chances are the cost will continue to rise. So, there's no better time than right now to insulate your home with Insulspray foam insulation. Common sense will save you dollars.

Why Insulspray?

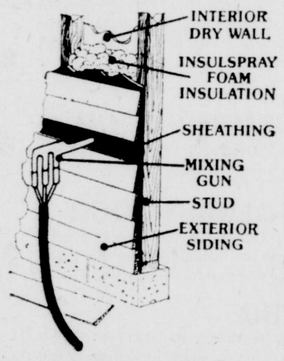
In most homes, more heat escapes through the walls than from anywhere else. New Insulspray foam insulation effectively reduces costly heat loss through walls as never before possible. In hot weather it works just as well to keep cool air in. Insulspray makes your home more comfortable to live in and much more economical to live with.

What is Insulspray?

Insulspray is a non-toxic, two-part insulation system made of liquid urea-formaldehyde resin plus a hardener containing a foaming agent.
The urea-formaldehyde and hardener are fed, under pressure, into a specifically designed mixing gun. The two components are ejected from the gun as a liquid foam consisting of millions of tiny air cells, highly effective in reducing heat loss in winter and heat intake in summer.

How is Insulspray installed?

Insulspray is installed from the outside, without mess, and usually in one day.
It is applied directly into the hollow stud space within the outer walls of your home. It flows up and down, around obstacles and fills every crack and crevice. Insulspray leaves no uninsulated pockets.
In a few days, the foam completely sets and forms a permanent insulating layer within the wall cavity.



What are the advantages?

First and foremost, Insulspray reduces costly heat loss through the walls of your home where it occurs most. It sets up a barrier to block the natural tendency of heat to flow from warm to cold surfaces of building materials. Consequently, your home stays warmer in winter, cooler in summer. And your fuel costs drop considerably.

"Debbie played terrifically today," Hersay coach Kay Duba said. "She kept us together on defense. Even though I felt this wasn't one of our better matches, I thing we showed we could come from behind."

DUBA ALSO credited setters Beth Frye and Patty Passas with good play. Chris Rathje scored highest for Wheeling with a 1.5 rating is setting.

After losing its first game 11-20, Arlington rallied to defeat Buffalo Grove with wins of 20-12 and 20-1. Karen Vobel scored 15 points in a row during the second and third games. Judy Satikas also was strong serving, while Rosey Schumacher spiked well.

In the South Division, Rolling Meadows ran its league record to 3-0 with a convincing 20-8, 20-11 defeat of Conant. JoAnn Wissen rated 1.7 setting, and Leslie Ahr had an even 2.0 in serving for Meadows' top scorer.

Prospect with a 2-0 record stayed right behind Meadows by downing Elk Grove 16-20, 20-12, 20-13. Jeannine Hahn earned a high rating in defense and spiking, while etammate Peggy McEneely was strong setting.

FOREST VIEW stopped Schaumburg 13-20, 20-13, 20-14 in a match featuring plenty of floor play. Both teams are starting nearly all new teams this season.

In a North-South match-up, Fremd defeated Hoffman Estates 20-18, 13-20, 20-1. Winning coach Dorothy Martin praised the play of Barb Brandt, Lisa Heath, Sue Sieorakowski and Patty Wojek.

Don't Waste Fuel Dollars

First, some straight talk

Let's face it. It costs you more every year to heat or cool your home no matter what type of fuel you use. And chances are the cost will continue to rise. So, there's no better time than right now to insulate your home with Insulspray foam insulation.
Common sense will save you dollars.

Why Insulspray?

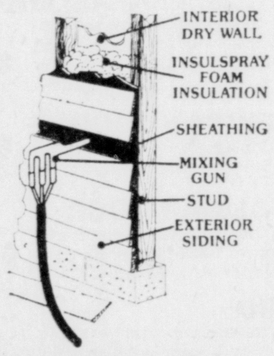
In most homes, more heat escapes through the walls than from anywhere else. New Insulspray foam insulation effectively reduces costly heat loss through walls as never before possible. In hot weather it works just as well to keep cool air in. Insulspray makes your home more comfortable to live in and much more economical to live with.

What is Insulspray?

Insulspray is a non-toxic, two-part insulation system made of liquid urea-formaldehyde resin plus a hardener containing a foaming agent.
The urea-formaldehyde and hardener are fed, under pressure, into a specifically designed mixing gun. The two components are ejected from the gun as a liquid foam consisting of millions of tiny air cells, highly effective in reducing heat loss in winter and heat intake in summer.

How is Insulspray installed?

Insulspray is installed from the outside, without mess, and usually in one day.
It is applied directly into the hollow stud space within the outer walls of your home. It flows up and down, around obstacles and fills every crack and crevice. Insulspray leaves no uninsulated pockets.
In a few days, the foam completely sets and forms a permanent insulating layer within the wall cavity.



What are the advantages?

First and foremost, Insulspray reduces costly heat loss through the walls of your home where it occurs most. It sets up a barrier to block the natural tendency of heat to flow from warm to cold surfaces of building materials. Consequently, your home stays warmer in winter, cooler in summer. And your fuel costs drop considerably.

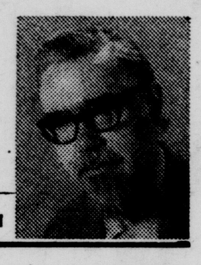
'74 Lincoln lights up owner's life



Doyle K. Getter

Your auto and you

Auto Column: We have a 1974 Lincoln that runs fine, but lately when we turn on the lights, the panel lights flicker. Not only do the panel lights flicker but the turn signal lights also flicker — as if we had the hazard lights on. Would appreciate your help.
Mrs. H. Hayes, Altamonte Springs, Fla.

Mrs. Hayes: I think you have a short somewhere in one of those circuits. A mechanic will have to take an ohmmeter and volt meter and trace each circuit separately to find where an excessive voltage draw is occurring.

Auto Column: There is an uneven beat-like "whupm whump" in my 1974 Buick Century station wagon at 30 miles an hour that diminishes at higher speeds. I have all new tires. Please advise.

MR. M.A.D., Nigara Falls, N.Y.

Mr. M.A.D.: If the "whump" began after you put on new tires, it almost has to be an out-of-balance or out-of-round problem with one or more tires. If you have had the "whump" longer than the tires, it might be a "body boom" that occurs at some speeds in many station wagons. Sometimes this boom has been eliminated by loosening the tailgate striker adjustment.

Auto Column: I have a 1968 Buick LeSabre with the four-barrel V-8 engine that was delivering 18-19 miles per gallon until the carburetor had to be replaced because during a tuneup the threads became badly stripped in replacing the gasoline filter. The car now delivers only 11-12 miles per gallon. What is the problem?

Henry R. Sale, Manlius, Ill.

Mr. Sale: I don't think your replacement carburetor was designed for that 1968 engine. Several later four-barrel 350s will fit the engine but will give you reduced mileage because they were not designed for the engine. A 1968-type carburetor is essential.

• • •

Auto Column: Our 1973 Buick Century gas power steering but in the morning, when we strat it for the first time that day, the steering wheel is so hard to turn. It gets better after the engine has run for several minutes. Is something wrong?

Bob Henry, Madison, Wis.

Mr. Henry: Yes, I thing something's wrong with the power steering pump. Your complaint makes me believe the pressure regulator valve is sticking when cold.

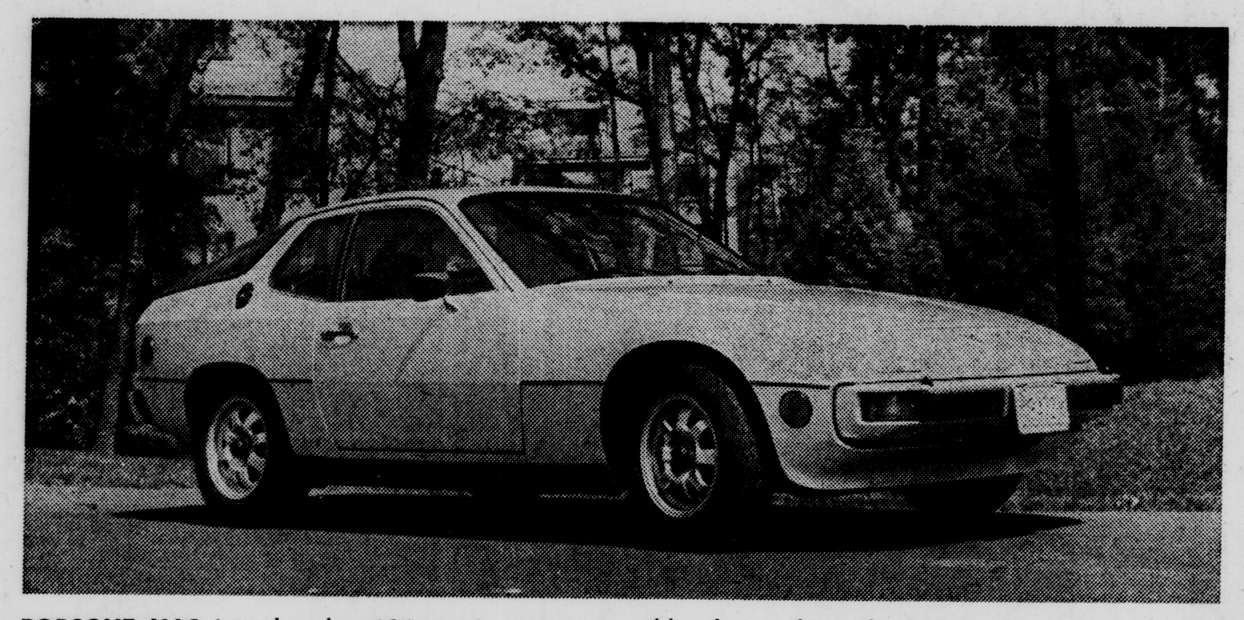
Auto Column: I have a 1972 VW that all of a sudden is very hard to start. It starts up right away but doesn't keep running. We try it maybe three times. Eventually it will keep going if I keep the accelerator all the way to the floor but it really struggles and sputters until it smooths out. After that, it starts easy for the rest of the day.

Mr. M. R., Springfield, Mass.

Mr. M. R.: Your carburetor needs adjustment. You don't seem to be getting any cold choke at all. It sputters and starts hard because the gas/fuel mixture is too lean. After the engine has warmed up, you don't need the choke so that's why it starts easily then.



PORSCHE HAS introduced a 924 sports coupe as successor to the discontinued 914. The most noticeable change from the 914 is the car's four-wheel independent suspension and ride.

New Porsche coupe offers a better ride

by DOYLE K. GETTER

It was a revoluntionary change a year ago when Porsche introduced its new 924 sports coupe as successor to the discontinued 914.

The most noticeable change is in the car's four-wheel independent suspension and ride. New spring and shock absorber rates have taken some of the harshness out of what is still a very firm ride but the sharp bouncing over road imperfections has been tamed considerably.

Automatic transmission was not available when I first tested the 924 a year ago. The four-speed manual transmission is still standard and I prefer it over the $399 extra cost three-speed automatic in the test car, which I thought was a little sluggish.

The four-speed box is more responsive and it is an easy one to shift. Porsche says that the top speed with the manual shift has been increased from 115 to 120 miles an hour with the new modified engine.

WITH AUTOMATIC transmission, the 924 will accelerate from zero to 50 miles an hour in 9.4 seconds and from 30 to 50 miles an hour in 5.1 seconds. Those times are only slightly better than average and one expects more from Porsche.

I averaged 18.1 miles per gallon in 235 miles of normal city and suburban driving and 23.4 miles per gallon on a 105 mile highway drive at 55 miles an hour.

The contoured front bucket seats are set low, are a little awkward to get into but are unusually comfortable after you wiggle into them. They are reclinable and can be moved forward or aft enough to make any sized driver comfortable.

The back seat is impossible for anyone to ride in unless the front seats are moved far forward. The back seat can be folded forward, however, to increase package space under the hatchback.

The base price of the 924 was $9,995.

Doyle K. Getter

Your auto and you

Auto Column: We have a 1974 Lincoln that runs fine, but lately when we turn on the lights, the panel lights flicker. Not only do the panel lights flicker but the turn signal lights also flicker — as if we had the hazard lights on. Would appreciate your help.
Mrs. H. Hayes, Altamonte Springs, Fla.

Mrs. Hayes: I think you have a short somewhere in one of those circuits. A mechanic will have to take an ohmmeter and volt meter and trace each circuit separately to find where an excessive voltage draw is occurring.

Auto Column: There is an uneven beat-like "whupm whump" in my 1974 Buick Century station wagon at 30 miles an hour that diminishes at higher speeds. I have all new tires. Please advise.

MR. M.A.D., Nigara Falls, N.Y.

Mr. M.A.D.: If the "whump" began after you put on new tires, it almost has to be an out-of-balance or out-of-round problem with one or more tires. If you have had the "whump" longer than the tires, it might be a "body boom" that occurs at some speeds in many station wagons. Sometimes this boom has been eliminated by loosening the tailgate striker adjustment.

Auto Column: I have a 1968 Buick LeSabre with the four-barrel V-8 engine that was delivering 18-19 miles per gallon until the carburetor had to be replaced because during a tuneup the threads became badly stripped in replacing the gasoline filter. The car now delivers only 11-12 miles per gallon. What is the problem?

Henry R. Sale, Manlius, Ill.

Mr. Sale: I don't think your replacement carburetor was designed for that 1968 engine. Several later four-barrel 350s will fit the engine but will give you reduced mileage because they were not designed for the engine. A 1968-type carburetor is essential.

• • •

Auto Column: Our 1973 Buick Century gas power steering but in the morning. when we strat it for the first time that day, the steering wheel is so hard to turn. It gets better after the engine has run for several minutes. Is something wrong?

Bob Henry, Madison, Wis.

Mr. Henry: Yes, I thing something's wrong with the power steering pump. Your complaint makes me believe the pressure regulator valve is sticking when cold.

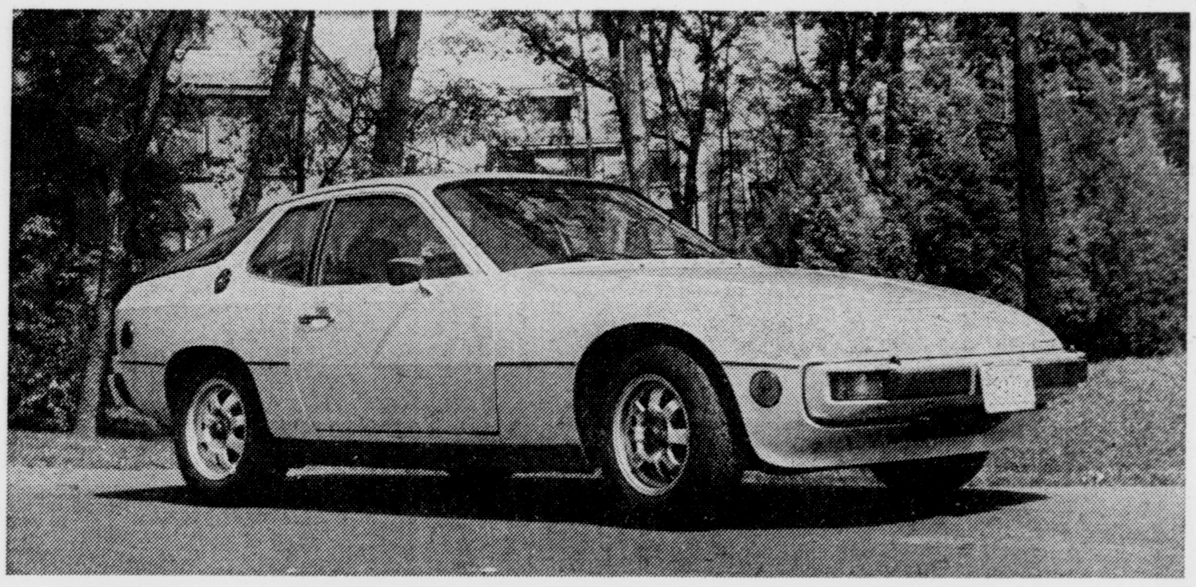
Auto Column: I have a 1972 VW that all of a sudden is very hard to start. It starts up right away but doesn't keep running. We try it maybe three times. Eventually it will keep going if I keep the accelerator all the way to the floor but it really struggles and sputters until it smooths out. After that, it starts easy for the rest of the day.

Mr. M. R., Springfield, Mass.

Mr. M. R.: Your carburetor needs adjustment. You don't seem to be getting any cold choke at all. It sputters and starts hard because the gas/fuel mixture is too lean. After the engine has warmed up, you don't need the choke so that's why it starts easily then.



PORSCHE HAS introduced a 924 sports coupe as successor to the discontinued 914. The most noticeable change from the 914 is the car's four-wheel independent suspension and ride.

New Porsche coupe offers a better ride

by DOYLE K. GETTER

It was a revoluntionary change a year ago when Porsche introduced its new 924 sports coupe as successor to the discontinued 914.

The most noticeable change is in the car's four-wheel independent suspension and ride. New spring and shock absorber rates have taken some of the harshness out of what is still a very firm ride but the sharp bouncing over road imperfections has been tamed considerably.

Automatic transmission was not available when I first tested the 924 a year ago. The four-speed manual transmission is still standard and I prefer it over the $399 extra cost three-speed automatic in the test car, which I thought was a little sluggish.

The four-speed box is more responsive and it is an easy one to shift. Porsche says that the top speed with the manual shift has been increased from 115 to 120 miles an hour with the new modified engine.

WITH AUTOMATIC transmission, the 924 will accelerate from zero to 50 miles an hour in 9.4 seconds and from 30 to 50 miles an hour in 5.1 seconds. Those times are only slightly better than average and one expects more from Porsche.

I averaged 18.1 miles per gallon in 235 miles of normal city and suburban driving and 23.4 miles per gallon on a 105 mile highway drive at 55 miles an hour.

The contoured front bucket seats are set low, are a little awkward to get into but are unusually comfortable after you wiggle into them. They are reclinable and can be moved forward or aft enough to make any sized driver comfortable.

The back seat is impossible for anyone to ride in unless the front seats are moved far forward. The back seat can be folded forward, however, to increase package space under the hatchback.

The base price of the 924 was $9,995.

Two suits better than one

The professor looked over the dummy for some time. There appeared to be several lines of play at his disposal. He could work on clubs, attack diamonds either by winning the first spade in dummy and trying an immediate finesse or by winning in his own hand and banging down the diamond ace and queen.

Finally, he decided to work on both suits on the assumption that the deuce of spades lead with a genuine fourth best.

As he said later, "Two suits are better than one."

He won the spade in his hand and led a club toward dummy. West ducked! Now the professor was in dummy while there were still two extra entry cards. He took the diamond finesse, cashed the ace of diamonds, entered dummy with the ace of hearts, knocked out the jack of diamonds and wound up making five notrump.

How would South have played the hand if East had held the club ace? He would have had to hope for a 3-3 club break.

Suppose West had hopped up with the ace of clubs? South could set up his fifth club, or take the diamond finesse for his ninth trick.

Ask Andy

Vocal cords main speech producers

Andy sends a World Book Year Book to Janice Reynolds, 13, of Sarasota, Fla., for her question:

HOW DO PEOPLE TALK?

Lots of things affect the way you talk. Your mouth, tongue, teeth and lips help shape the sounds of your voice and color and resonance is given through the nasal cavity. When you come down with a cold, your nasal passages become stopped up and your voice is very definitely changed. But the most important equipment for allowing you to talk is found in the throat.

Main producers of sounds that come out of your mouth are your vocal cords. These are two rather small bands of tissue in your throat that stretch across your voice box or larynx. One band stretches on each side of your windpipe opening. Muscles in your larynx stretch and relax the vocal cords.

Man's voice is highly developed. Other animals can make sounds, but none can express complex ideas through a variety of arrangements of consonants and vowel sounds as man can.

You can use your voice for making a wide variety of noises, for singing and talking. Your ability to make so many different sounds actually is linked to another secret weapon: you also have the ability to think.

When you breathe, you relax your vocal cords so they form a V-shaped opening that allows air through. When you speak, you pull the vocal cords by the attached muscles, narrowing the opening. Then, as you drive air from the lungs through the larynx, the air vibrates the tightened vocal cords and sounds result.

Your voice equipment is so well organized that you can use your vocal cords, muscles and lungs in a wide variety of combinations without even thinking about it.

The more tightly your vocal cords are stretched, the higher the sound you produce. The more relaxed your cords are, the lower the sound. In your normal speech, vocal cords are first stretched and then relaxed to produce a variety of sounds.

A voice's pitch is set by the size of the larynx. Women usually have voices that are higher pitched than men's because their vocal cords generally are shorter. Boys and girls usually have vocal cords that are about the same size until the boys reach puberty. At that time the voice boxes of boys suddenly grow larger and their voices generally change to a lower pitch.

If you strain your voice, it can affect your vocal cords. Muscular tension caused by nervousness also can do the same thing.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Kevin Parker, 9, of Utica, N.Y., for his question:

WHAT IS A MIRAGE?

When you're driving along the highway on a warm day, sometimes you can see ahead on the paved road something that looks like a distant pool of water. People on hot deserts often think they are seeing lakes where there is only flat sand. Both are mirages. The word mirage comes from a Latin word meaning to look at.

All mirages are caused by hot air near the surface of the earth that bends or refracts light rays from the sky toward our eyes. On the highway we are actually seeing part of the sky on the road ahead of us. Rays of light from the sky hit the hot air layers just above the pavement and are then refracted along our line of vision. Presto, we have a mirage. Because mirages are actual rays of light, they can be photographed.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

Then, as you drive air from the lungs through the larynx, the air vibrates the tightened vocal cords and sounds result.

Your voice equipment is so well organized that you can use your vocal cords, muscles and lungs in a wide variety of combinations without even thinking about it.

The more tightly your vocal cords are stretched, the higher the sound you produce. The more relaxed your cords are, the lower the sound. In your normal speech, vocal cords are first stretched and then relaxed to produce a variety of sounds.

A voice's pitch is set by the size of the larynx. Women usually have voices that are higher pitched than men's because their vocal cords generally are shorter. Boys and girls usually have vocal cords that are about the same size until the boys reach puberty. At that time the voice boxes of boys suddenly grow larger and their voices generally change to a lower pitch.

If you strain your voice, it can affect your vocal cords. Muscular tension caused by nervousness also can do the same thing.

Andy sends the 1977 World Book Science Year Annual to Kevin Parker, 9, of Utica, N.Y., for his question:

WHAT IS A MIRAGE?

When you're driving along the highway on a warm day, sometimes you can see ahead on the paved road something that looks like a distant pool of water. People on hot deserts often think they are seeing lakes where there is only flat sand. Both are mirages. The word mirage comes from a Latin word meaning to look at.

All mirages are caused by hot air near the surface of the earth that bends or refracts light rays from the sky toward our eyes. On the highway we are actually seeing part of the sky on the road ahead of us. Rays of light from the sky hit the hot air layers just above the pavement and are then refracted along our line of vision. Presto, we have a mirage. Because mirages are actual rays of light, they can be photographed.

Send your question on a post card to Ask Andy in care of The Daily Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, making sure to include your name, age and address. Entries are open to boys and girls 7 to 17.

Conjure up some compost

by PETER TONGE

Ever since I invested in a good shredder, I've kept abreast of the garden's considerable compost needs. That's because a wide variety of bulky materials — discarded Christmas trees, rose prunings, chicken bones, and the like — compost readily once they have been mechanically broken down to start with.

In my own experience my reputation as something of a shredding buff has spread so that now neighbors and friends bring their tree trimmings, hedge clippings and sometimes even their dandelions to my door, thus greatly adding to the size of my compost heaps.

TAKE A RECENT case. Some workers at a local church finally tackled and tamed a wildly overgrown hedge bordering the church property. When they were finished they had four truckloads of trimmings to dispose of and they knew my yard was as good a place as any to leave them.

It took several hours of steady shredding but the results were worth the effort: one cubic yard of fine green material all ready for composting. Within 24 hours the ground-up clippings had grown so hot that a visitor who thrust his hand into the pile to test it described the experience as "like putting your hand into scalding water."

A good compost pile is, in fact, a fertilizer factory. Admittedly, the biological processes are natural, but compost itself is as "unnatural" as a loaf of bread, says Lawrence D. Hills in his book "Fertility Without Fertilizers" (Universe Books). Nature does not make bread, nor does it make compost. The decaying matter seen on the forest floor is leafmold, not compost, and there's quite a difference.

IN THE SLOW decomposition of leaves, grasses, and weeds into leafmold some nutrients contained in the original matter are lost to the atmosphere in the form of gas. In contrast, the frenzied bacterial action in a manmade compost heap adds more nitrogen to the compost than the original ingredients contained — hence the value of composting compared to simply spreading organic material over the surface of the soil in a process called sheet composting.

If there is a trick to making an active compost pile it is to provide it with enough air, moisture, and nitrogen. Shredding the material helps considerably, too, by providing more shattered surfaces for the bacteria to work in.

There are three types of bacteria that enter and dominate a compost heap depending on the prevailing temperature — psychrophiles, mesophiles and thermophiles.

Psychrophiles are most active at around 55 degrees F. But they can and do still operate at around zero F. This is why the ice cream and other goodies won't keep indefinitely even in your freezer. In cold weather these bacteria are the first to inhabit your compost pile and they are the fellows who keep it breaking down in winter, even if very slowly.

THE MESOPHILES work best at temperatures we humans prefer and they effect most of the decomposition. But given enough nitrogen, which is the fuel bacteria feed on, they work so furiously that they give off energy in the form of heat. Pretty soon the pile is so hot that they have worked themselves right out of a job. Then the thermophiles take over (at around 100 degrees) and continue the process until the heap reaches "scalding" temperatures.

This heat (between 150 and 160 degrees F. in a well-constructed heap) indicates an active pile, but is not vital to good compost in the end. As we have seen, the cooler-temperature bacteria do most of the work. But the high temperatures are beneficial in that they pasteurize the compost heap, destroying unwanted organisms and killing most seeds, tomato seed being one hardy exception.

Both cool-and hot-temperature fungi also move into your compost pile, breaking down to the cellulose and lignins which the bacteria choose largely to ignore. Then there are the actinomycetes, sort of half-breed organisms — part bacteria, part fungus — which are particularly effective in tackling the tough woody items in a heap. They, in effect, clean up after the bacteria have left off.

BUT BACK TO making an active heap. Green material, such as fresh weeds, plants, and the hedge trimmings I was given, contain enough nitrogen to fuel a good heap Dry cellulose matter — brown grass, dead weeds, and dry leaves, for example — need additional nitrogen. Manure and fresh kitchen waste is a good source. An activated sewage sludge, such as Milorganite, is also good. Other nitrogen-rich materials are: alfalfa meal, blood meal, cottonseed meal, bonemeal, fish meal, fish waste, etc.

Mix these in with the dryer materials or else sprinkle them in layers in the heap. Finally, thoroughly wet the heap and it should begin to fire up with 48 hours. See that the heap stays moist but don't let it get soggy.

When planting, allow for nature's limitations

Guest gardener

Traditionally, spring and fall have shared the honor as the major seasons for planting. Through modern nursery techniques (containerization of plant material), the season has been extended to include the summer months. Plants that have been grown in containers have their entire root system intact so that shock from digging plant material (balled and burlapped) is eliminated.

During the spring and fall months it is best to transplant large field-grown material. Weather conditions (warm days and cool nights) are ideal for plant establishment. Extremes in weather, such as this summer's long string of 90 degree days, cause stoppage in the photosynthetic process.

If your plan calls for large trees, shrubs or evergreens, be sure to use this precious time to get them planted. After the major planting has been accomplished, smaller plant material, respectively perennials and annuals, can be planted at your convenience.

AFTER CONTENDING with the fickleness of Midwestern weather, soil complexities have to be considered. Although our state's greatest resource is her soil, drainage is a big problem. Farmers have rectified this problem through extensive installation of clay drain tiles. With excess water channeled away they can fully use the soil's richness.

IN ADDITION to the soil's inability to drain well, home construction magnifies this problem. Home owners in a new development face a double jeopardy. The dark colored top soil is not the problem. The underlying strata, the light colored clay area, is a concern.

Clay particles are flat, microscopically small chemical combinations of weathered rock materials. Keep in mind that if water has trouble permeating through this medium, plant roots cannot grow well. Most roots will be confined to the dark top soil. Even large oak trees do not have tap roots (roots extending straight down in the soil), because the clay area confines the limits 90 per cent of the feeder roots to the top six inches of the soil. Hawthorns seem to be the one plant that can actually extend its root zone into the clay area.

THE HOMEOWNER'S only recourse is to prepare the best planting area possible. Start by digging a hole at least six inches wider and three inches deeper than the container or plant material. Separate the good soil from the clay and place in two piles. Replace with a mixture consisting of two-thirds soil and one-third peat moss or sharp sand.

Balled and burlapped material can be planted with the string and burlap intact. Containers call for a different approach. I believe that after the container is taken off, the root ball should be roughed up to help the roots get a foothold in the new soil. Most containerized plant materials are grown in soilless mixes. If planted in this area, an interface will develop between the mixture in the container and the soil it's to be planted in.

After planting at the depth it was grown in the nursery, be sure NOT to fertilize in or around the planting area. Fertilizers are primarily made of sale compounds and if put into the planting hole at this time will dehydrate young feeder root tips. Wait until your plant shows new top growth before giving it a helping hand.

Water the plant well to eliminate any air pockets that may develop, but after this initial dosage limit watering to 10-14 day intervals during the hot months of July-August. After the first year, rely on nature to take over this job.

This is the last in a four-part GARDEN TALK series about landscaping your home written by George Szewczyk of Chas. Klehm & Son Nursery.

EVERGREENS are most easily moved in the fall. Once the hole for your evergreen is dug, enrich the piled soil with peat moss or mulch for the fill-back. Work the peat or mulch in thoroughly, especially if you live in an area where poor soil conditions exist.

Capture beauty of fall flowers

Dried flowers make beautiful floral arrangements for fall. While dried floral pieces can be purchased in stores throughout the year, it is more fun to create them yourself . . . and much more economical.

Wild flowers and weeds (yes, those same garden weeds you've been cursing all summer) make beautiful arrangements with rose hips from your summer roses. Roadsides and hillsides can provide you with beautiful flowers for fall arrangements if the area is not protected by law and the local plants are not considered endangered species.

Flowers still in bloom should be hung upside down on wire coat hangers while they dry out and their stems harden. Flowers should be picked as they are drying out. Cut them, don't pull them up by the roots (unless you are weeding your garden). Use small cans such as the 3½-oz. size tuna can for frogs. Stuff the cans with bits of cardboard and arrange the flowers by placing the stems between the cardboard in the cans.
